DEFENSE LISTS QUESTIONS IT WILL ASK HAUPTMANN

To Seek to Show His Partner Fisch, Now Dead, Wrote Lindbergh Ransom Notes and Got Money.

PROSECUTION HOPES TO REST THIS WEEK

A. S. Osborn, Handwriting Expert, to Return to Stand Tomorrow—Others to Support His View.

By the Associated Press.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 12.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's lawyer will ask him seven questions when he takes the stand in his own defense, Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel announces.

The first will be: "Did you kidnap the Lindbergh baby?" and the answer, Reilly said, would be: "No."

The other questions, and their expected answers, Reilly said, were: 2. Were you in Hopewell, N. J., the night of the kidnapping? A. No. 3. Did you make the ladder? (which the State contends was used in gaining admission to the Lindbergh nursery). A. No.

4. Did you go up that ladder to kidnap the Lindbergh baby? A. No.

5. Were you in New Jersey the night of the kidnapping? A. No. 6. Did you write the ransom notes? A. No.

7. Where did you get the money that was found in your garage? A. From Isador Fisch.

Reilly said that he would introduce as the second witness for the defense Hauptmann's wife, Anna.

Lays Notes to Fisch.

Reilly said again he would name the late Isidor Fisch as the writer of the Lindbergh ransom notes.

Handwriting experts, seeking to counteract the prosecution testimony of Albert S. Osborn, who named Richard Hauptmann as the writer of the notes, will try to establish that Fisch was the author.

Then the defense hopes to prove further Hauptmann's alibi—that he received the ransom money, found in his possession, from Fisch, his former business partner.

Reilly and other defense attorneys held a conference in Trenton this afternoon and with their own handwriting experts studied the St. Louis newspaper reproductions of the ransom notes and Hauptmann's handwriting. Reilly said, and concluded that Hauptmann did not write the ransom letters.

S. C. Malone of Baltimore, an associate of Myers, also offered his services to the defense but Reilly said he would not call Malone.

Attorneys for the prosecution said handwriting experts had examined samples of Fisch's handwriting and pronounced them dissimilar from that in the ransom notes.

Moreover, they said, they had evidence enough to remove him "completely" from the case. They will try to establish that Fisch and Hauptmann did not meet until several months after the kidnapping, and that Hauptmann said by time had already passed several ransom payments.

"Evidence of Extortion." the State produced "evidence of extortion" against Hauptmann, but said it would prove that Fisch collected the $50,000 ransom, paid over to him at St. Raymond's Cemetery on April 2, 1932, by Dr. John F. Condon.

Reilly said no German societies, as has been reported, were collecting money for Hauptmann's defense. The expenses of the trial were coming out of the pockets, he said, and he added he did not expect to be paid for his work.

The de France will dock in New York Tuesday, bringing to this country three Germans in the company of Detective Arthur Johnson of New York. The identity of the three has not been disclosed.

It is thought some of them may be relatives of Fisch, who died in Germany.

TENSION AND FOREBODINGS IN SAAR; OUTCOME OF VOTE TODAY CANNOT BE PREDICTED

Nazis Appear to Have Overplayed Their Hand—Hitler Center of Attack by Opposition—Catholics Determining Factor.

SAAR BEDECKED AS AT CHRISTMAS TIME, SNOW FALLS

Lighted Evergreen Trees on House Tops; Villages Are Transformed.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 12.—(By Wire.)—On the eve of its momentous plebiscite, the Saar is gripped by tension and forebodings. The uncertainty is literally nerve-racking, even for foreigners who are personally unconcerned. It is much more so for the normally stolid and unemotional Saarlanders, who have everything to gain or lose.

The outcome of tomorrow's balloting is absolutely impossible to foresee. Members both of the League of Nations Governing Board and of the Plebiscite Commission refuse, even confidentially, to venture predictions.

Several facts stand out in broad relief, however. The Deutsches Front, under which the pro-Nazi elements have concentrated, is panicky. It appears that they have overplayed their hand during six months of intensive agitation. The Freihets (Freedom) Front, composed of five opposition groups—Socialists, Communists, Protestants, Catholic minority and trade unionists—is more aggressively determined than ever.

These anti-Nazi elements seem to have drawn confidence, inspiration and hope from unseen sources, despite the ferocious Nazi threats, which are becoming more ominous as the test approaches. Since Wednesday, mounted police and landjaegers have been busy, chiefly in Saarbruecken, good-naturedly yet firmly dispersing spontaneous demonstrators. But individual terrorism, which it is impossible to suppress, is widespread. There has been an average of a dozen shootings a day.

Movement of Voters.

Today the entire Saargebiet was in a seething ferment with the movement of non-resident voters. The Railway Administration is transporting 55,000 of these non-residents, 48,500 from Germany and 6,500 from France, the latter group heading for 1800 frontiers from South America, to various voting centers. Another 50,000 Saarlanders, obliged to vote in the districts where they resided in June, 1919, are also being carried free by the railways.

While the Deutsches Front leaders admit that the "minority" vote will be as high as 20 per cent, the opposition is making no predictions. The only definite basis for deduction is this correspondent's information, from the highest official source, that, although the railway workers were asked to vote Tuesday, only 20 per cent of them accepted that opportunity. The remainder, despite urgings, preferred to vote tomorrow, which pointed out more than 1,000,000 employees had lost their jobs since 1920 and 400,000 worked on a part time basis.

The principles announced by the co-ordinator contemplate effecting economies by the expense of employment, reducing purchasing power and transferring to the shoulders of employees the financial obligations of the carriers for which they are in no wise responsible.

The Association attributed the railroads' difficulties to "unsound financial policies," loss of traffic to competitors and failure to furnish the service demanded.

Eastman's Speech.

The meeting was attended by 1600 men, representing every railway in the United States.

In his address to the meeting, Eastman said:

"Take the six-hour day—unless it is put in at the expense of labor, it will add at least $400,000,000 to railroad expenses. The shortened work day cannot be applied to the railroads alone without disaster."

Eastman described the railroads as in a "bad state of health" due to the depression, debts, competition, relatively high freight rates. He said $5 were in receivership or bankruptcy and that over $1,500,000,000 of bonds were in default.

Suggests Changes.

He suggested that reorganization and extending Federal regulation to competitors of the railroads would help. He felt the railroads could create employment by scaling down costs and bettering its service.

Eastman took up the "make work" measures and asked: "What will they do to the railroads in their competition with trucks, boats and other competitive agencies?"

The co-ordinator suggested a "system of dismissal compensation" for workers displaced by consolidations. It would provide that all men 60 years old or more should receive the same annuity to which they are entitled under the pension plan at 65. The compensation from that age would grade down, with the young men receiving their compensation in a lump sum and with authority to find other employment.

He declared that railroads should not be hampered in the use of labor saving methods so that their business could increase, resulting, in the end, in greater employment.

Psychology of Fear.

Radio stations all over Germany fill the air with emotional appeals, scarcely mentioning Hitler. In the Saargebiet, particularly in mining villages and blast-furnace districts, there is an ominous undercurrent. If Hitler gets the Saar, he may find he has caught a Tartar.

The psychology of fear is deeply ingrained, after months of intensive terroristic pressure on the part of Nazi units operating in mines, steel works and factories, and among the peasants. This fear cannot be easily removed from the minds of the population.

RAILWAY LABOR HEADS STAND PAT FOR 6-HOUR DAY

Co-ordinator Declares Increased Business Is Necessary to Enable Lines to Hire More Men.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The American Labor Executives' Association today renewed its demand for the six-hour day at the present pay, despite a warning by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Transportation Co-ordinator, that the carriers could not bear the expense of it.

After Eastman had spoken, the Association issued a statement announcing the intention of asking Congress to support the following legislative program:

An amendment to the 1916 act establishing an eight-hour day for employees of carriers engaged in interstate commerce to provide a six-hour day, without reduction in present compensation now received for an eight-hour day.

A bill to provide that all trains be manned by a full crew of competent employees with the minimum number stipulated.

A bill to prohibit the operation of freight trains of more than 70 cars, or passenger trains of more than 14 cars.

Would Alter Liability Act.

An amendment to the Federal Employers' Liability Act "intended to give employees and their families opportunity to recover damages in case of injury or death without the cumbersome and technical doctrines in the present act."

An amendment to alter from 16 to 24 the number of hours which employees actually engaged in the transportation of passengers or property by railroads would be permitted to remain on duty. The nine-hour day of train dispatchers would be changed to six consecutive hours of service.

A bill to require carriers to maintain tracks and bridges in safe condition and to install and maintain signals and other safety devices.

AMELIA EARHART FLIES 2400 MILES, HONOLULU TO OAKLAND, IN 18 HOURS

MISS EARHART'S OWN ACCOUNT OF HER SOLO FLIGHT

She Found Radio a Cheering Companion on Her Honolulu - to - Oakland Journey.

CLOUDS PRODUCED ILLUSION OF LAND

Too Busy on Way Over Even to Consider Sleep—Found Hole in Fog Over San Francisco.

By AMELIA EARHART.

As Told to an International News Service Correspondent.

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 12.—There is no feeling so wonderful as that of sighting land after hours and hours over a restless sea.

When I saw the California coast this afternoon about 50 miles south of San Francisco I couldn't believe my eyes. Of course, my eyes were tired, but that wasn't the main reason for my disbelief.

All the way across the Pacific, as on any transoceanic flight, I had illusions of land. At about 2000 or 3000 feet altitude clouds look like land. Several times by heart thumped with joy, only to sink when I found that my "land" was nothing but a cloud.

When I finally flew over the California coast line and saw cities and automobiles which could not be running on a cloud, I almost sang. However, I never sang and so I just smiled to myself.

I am not so very tired considering the time I have been in the air, although I probably look rather a wreck.

Radio Worked Perfectly.

The great comfort of the trip, especially toward the end, was my radio. It worked perfectly and I certainly enjoyed hearing from various broadcasting stations.

I was sorry that I couldn't be heard as well as I heard other people. I don't understand what was the matter with the sending part of my set, for there surely was nothing wrong with the receiving apparatus.

The radio seemed to bring me close to people and to lessen the fierce loneliness of the hours of darkness and even of daylight over the water.

I would thrill when I heard a friendly voice, and of course was doubly thrilled by the voice of my husband from Honolulu.

I never had any doubt at any time that I would be successful in reaching my goal. I had perfect confidence in my motor and it did not fail me in any respect. I just listened to the hum of it hour after hour, and it was the sweetest music to my ears.

However, little things become very annoying on such a long trip. A little ventilator in the cabin kept opening and closing until it wore on my nerves to such an extent that I considered trying to knock it off. But I realized that would be a hopeless task and so desisted and just made up my mind not to have any nerves.

I would have made my hop in my scheduled time of 16 hours excepting for getting off my course now and then. I was never far off my course, but the little deviations I made caused the minutes to run into hours.

Just before we reached the east curb, a south-bound automobile, attempting to pass two other machines abreast and going the same direction, struck us.

At City Hospital it was reported the boy suffered fractures of the skull, neck, jaw and both legs.

He resided with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Towns and was a sixth grade student at Garfield School. His mother, Mrs. Laura Young, who is separated from her husband, lives at 2216 Keokuk street with her two sisters.

Increase in Influenza Cases.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—"Quite an increase" in the number of influenza cases during the last two weeks was reported tonight by Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, head of the United States Public Health Service. Cumming said he hesitated to call it an epidemic, but that the malady "probably is more prevalent than at any time during the last five or six years."

Cumming said that the most cases were of a mild type. Influenza was prevalent in South America also, he said.

Charles Young Jr. Fatally Hurt as He Crosses at Jefferson Avenue and Utah Street.

Charles Young Jr., 12 years old, 2115 Withnell avenue, was killed at 8:30 o'clock last night at Jefferson avenue and Utah street by an automobile, the driver of which fled.

Witnesses said the machine was traveling between 35 and 40 miles an hour. In the street, police found a parking light, glass from a headlight, a metal headlight shade and a nickel plated radiator ornament.

Oliver Fischer, coal dealer, and his brother, Joseph Fischer, the boy's uncles, also of the Withnell avenue address, were knocked down by the machine but suffered only minor injuries.

"We were returning home from a Cherokee street bowling alley," Joseph Fischer told police. "We started to cross to the east side of Jefferson avenue from the southwest corner at Utah street and the automobile traffic signal was in our favor."

"Just before we reached the east curb, a south-bound automobile, attempting to pass two other machines abreast and going the same direction, struck us."

NO TROUBLE ON WAY, SHE SAYS; FIRST TO MAKE FLIGHT ALONE

"I Want to Sleep More Than Anything Else," Flyer Remarks After California Landing—In Bed Two Hours Later.

5000 AT AIRPORT; BOY HURT IN CRASH

Aviatrix Throttled Plane Down During Last Five Hours to Save Fuel—No Reason for Her Venture, She Explains.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 12.—Amelia Earhart Putnam landed her red monoplane here at 1:31 p. m. today, completing the first solo flight from Hawaii to the mainland in 18 hours, 16 minutes. The airline distance from Honolulu to Oakland is 2408 miles.

After more than three hours of anxious waiting and confusion over her whereabouts, watchers at the airport did not recognize the 36-year-old flyer's plane as, without circling the field, it swooped down to the runway. Then the crowd of 5000 gave a cheer and surged forward.

Without stopping, the flyer taxied her ship toward a hangar. For a time it seemed the whirling propeller would injure spectators dashing toward the plane. John P. Evans Jr., 18-year-old University of California student, suffered fractures of his left elbow and leg when he was knocked down and trampled by the crowd.

Combs Hair and Smiles.

As the plane came to a stop, the cockpit covering was opened, and the pilot was seen running a comb through her tousled hair. She smiled at the ovation with which her appearance was greeted.

A few minutes later her plane was pulled into the hangar and the doors were shut, but not before many persons had reached the side of the plane and had managed to grasp her hand and say a word or two.

"I'm tired," was her first word. "I don't want to sit down," she said firmly when an attendant saw her fatigue and offered her a chair. "I've been sitting down a long time."

For three hours prior to the landing the whole California Coast was on edge over her whereabouts. She was reported variously 600 miles at sea, 50 miles from the coast, off her course, south of San Francisco, fighting fog and facing exhaustion of her fuel supply while still over the sea.

Asked if she had been worried, Miss Earhart said: "Oh, I thought I would like to have the sight of land a couple of times."

Never Lost Course.

She said she never was lost but told how she veered south of her course and first sighted land about 60 miles south of San Francisco.

"I wasn't sure that it was land I sighted," she said. "I throttled back my motor purposely to save fuel, and I don't understand why anyone should have been worried about me."

"The reason I didn't give my position was because I didn't shoot the stars (with a sextant) and therefore couldn't give it."

An interviewer mentioned seeing a rainbow over the Golden Gate as Miss Earhart was nearing the coast.

"Oh, rainbows!" she exclaimed. "I flew through many of them on the way here."

"I waited a lot of time because some of the equipment was new, and a new type of compass threw me off."

"The ventilator blew off and this bothered me considerably also. But the motor functioned perfectly."

PAGE 2A CONJECTURES ON ADVERSE "GOLD CLAUSE" RULING

Washington Wonders What Administration Will Do if Supreme Court Upsets Monetary Program.

POSSIBILITY OF QUICK ACTION BY CONGRESS

Consensus at Capital Said to Be That Offsetting Measures Would Have to Be Taken at Once.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Quick Congressional action to escape from what administration spokesmen have called possible "chaos" is considered likely should the Supreme Court overturn the Roosevelt monetary program in the "gold clause" cases. No ruling is expected before Feb. 4.

Some persons asserted that regardless of the Supreme Court's decision, the Treasury could make no change in its present method of redeeming maturing Government bonds until Congress so ordered.
Following conclusion of the Supreme Court arguments, Wall Street prices declined sharply today, but later stiffened. There was a rush of "gold clause" bond buying, but the bond market generally was irregular. Grains again slumped but recovered.

The nine Supreme Court Justices held a five-hour conference today.
The meeting lasted until 5 o'clock, an unusually late hour, and it was assumed most of the time was devoted to discussion of the many questions presented by the "gold clause" cases in which oral arguments occupied most of the court's time during the week.

It is known that the court desires to expedite its opinion in the gold clause cases as it did in the oil cases. Discussion in Washington.
Although officials privately expressed confidence that the court would decide in favor of the Government, the subject was discussed in Capitol Hill, especially among the inflationist bloc, and in administration quarters as well.

A decision against the Government would mean, in short, that gold bonds and contracts would be worth-in present devalued currency—169 per cent of their face value. The result would be to increase the outstanding public and private debt from about $100,000,000-000 to $169,000,000,000.

The court's ruling will involve the constitutionality of a congressional resolution declaring invalid the clause of most contracts guaranteeing payment on demand in a stipulated quantity of gold, in the equivalent of that amount of gold.

Congress, through the President, ordered the amount of gold behind each dollar reduced by 40.94 per cent, and the Treasury has been meeting gold bond redemptions with $1 of the devaluated currency for each dollar of the bonds' face value.

No Washington official would say today that should the court decide adversely the Treasury would at once begin paying $1.69 for every dollar of gold bonds. The supply of currency would not be great enough. The consensus was that some offsetting action would at once be taken.

Various alternatives have been speculated on. In Greenville, S. C., Representative McSwain said he thought it likely that in the constitutional convention would be called.
He pointed out that the Constitution gives the power to call such a convention, adding that the matter
"could be handled in the minimum time, possibly 30 days, and we would be back on the road to normality."

Congressional inflationists meanwhile were studying the possibility of increasing the membership of the Supreme Court from nine to 11 or 12 within the 25 days elapsing between the decision and the court ruling on a Government appeal for reconsideration.

Third Possible Solution.
Such a course, however, was regarded as a last resort, although all were agreed that certainly President Roosevelt would leave nothing undone to offset a decision which would destroy the administration's new monetary system.

A third possible avenue of action may lie in the President declaring an emergency and asserting control over the currency under the old wartime laws which devolved for the banking moratorium when he took office.

The statistically minded are wondering how much indebtedness actually is involved in gold clause contracts of one sort or another.
While Government contracts told the Court it amounted to 100 billion dollars, it was contended that this
insurance policies and mortgages.
The total, it was suggested, might actually approximate 500 billion dollars.

Some members of the Senate silver bloc said congressional withdrawal of the authority delegated to President Roosevelt to regulate the price of gold might be demanded at a monetary conference called for next Wednesday by Senator Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma.
Thomas proposed the meeting to agree on a program for further cheapening the dollar's value.

One Senator, who declined to permit the use of his name, said he and it was only little things, like the ventilator, that bothered me.

Egg and Tomato Juice.
"I had a lot of sandwiches with me but I didn't eat any of them.
I had a hard-boiled egg, which was quite a luxury, and drank some tomato juice.

"I feel just filthy and I want a bath."
Miss Earhart said commercial flights between Honolulu and California were "entirely feasible."
"They are inevitable and we'll be flying everywhere in a short time," she said.

Asked about the three hours during which little or nothing was heard from her plane, she said:
"I listened to a message broadcast by my husband (George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher) and was greatly cheered by his voice. I also listened to musical programs broadcast throughout the night."

She expressed belief that the use of two-way voice radio communication was advisable for planes making distance flights. This type of radio was a part of her elaborate equipment.

She said there had been "no purpose or reason" for her flight which she had attributed as more dangerous and much harder than by Atlantic crossing.

Police escorted her to a hotel where she went to sleep two hours after landing. Airport attendants said she had left instructions not to "refuel her plane."

"I want sleep more than anything else," she said.
In landing here she abandoned a plan disclosed in Honolulu this morning by her husband to continue on 750 miles to Salt Lake City if conditions proved favorable, to set a distance non-stop record for women.

Surprise Take-Off.
The secret preparations for the take-off from Honolulu were given a sudden setback when a tropical downpour made Wheeler Field, the airport, soggy with mud early yesterday afternoon. Nearly everyone took it for granted that she would not attempt to get the heavily laden plane in the air under such conditions.

But at 4:30 p. m., just after the rain stopped, an automobile containing Miss Earhart, her husband and Lieut. George H. Spearhawk rolled up to the hangar. Her monoplane, already fueled and equipped, was wheeled out and the motor was started. A naval weather report indicated gradually clearing weather, but varying wind prospects ahead.

The flyer gave her ship a close inspection, climbed into the pilot's seat and tested her motor and instruments.
Putnam stuck his head inside for a final word. It was obvious that she already had said their last farewell at Spearhawk's home, where Miss Earhart rested for the flight.

She waved her hand and smiled at the crowd of about 200 and taxied into position. The motor roared;
the plane started across the field, slinging up a shower of mud bein 1932 when she flew alone from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Culmore, Northern Ireland, on a projected flight to Paris.

HONOLULU, Jan. 12.—George P.
Putnam, when informed today that his wife, Amelia Earhart Putnam, had landed safely at Oakland, Cal., said: "Naturally, I am extremely happy."

"I cut through this hole and shot down to the field as fast as I could,
wasting no time in taking any turns around the airport.
I ate nothing but one hard-boiled egg and some tomato juice during the entire trip, and I found that sufficient. However, I imagine I have lost a few pounds. It isn't get up tomorrow and decide what I'll do next—either fly on east or stay in California for a while."

away it may have been an illusion, like my "land" which always turned to clouds.
I was particularly glad to see the President Pierce about 250 miles off the California coast. I was getting tired and thought I had wandered off my course somewhat. The President Pierce straightened me out just the little bit I needed—sort of verified my course—and I came booming in, with never a thought that I might not reach land.

This was a much more dangerous trip than my crossing of the Atlantic. It was much harder, too.
But I really enjoyed it, and now that it is all over, energy comes surging back to me again.
I was asked many times by radio during the flight to give my position. I couldn't do it, and I don't think any pilot could run a plane alone and navigate it and give the position. It takes time to figure out. I cut through this hole and shot down to the field as fast as I could,

RICHBERG'S IDEA NOW IS NOT TO CHANGE '7-A'

Administration Hopes to Forestall Fight in Congress, Leave Interpretation to Courts.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The celebrated section 7-A of the National Recovery Act, which purports to guarantee labor's right of collective bargaining, may remain unchanged when the revised version of the measure is presented to Congress for re-enactment a few weeks hence. This disclosure is likely to cause some surprise, since the indefiniteness of the section has precipitated some of the most violent controversies arising under NRA.

The administration's tentative decision to let the provision stand in its present form apparently is actuated by the desire, first, to avoid antagonizing either labor or business by taking a more positive stand one way or the other; and second, to forestall a violent fight in Congress. By steering the middle course the administration would shift the responsibility of a final interpretation to the courts.

The act is being rewritten by Donald R. Richberg, executive director of the National Emergency Council. This week a spokesman of the United States Chamber of Commerce visited him and said the chamber felt that, if 7-A was incorporated in the act, it should be revised to state that coercion on the part of union labor (in the matter of joining a union) was equally abhorrent with coercion on the part of employers. In other words, that it was just as unlawful for a union to force employees into its ranks as for employers to force them into company unions.

Richberg replied that his advice was to let the section alone. He warned the employers' spokesman that if the section was reopened organized labor would demand a provision making union membership compulsory if determined by majority vote. He volunteered the further information that he had given corresponding advice to William Green of the American Federation, telling him that if labor reopeners the issue business would certainly demand a weakening of the section.

Of course, it remains a question whether either or both sides will accept this advice. Assuming that they do so, and further that the administration itself does not change its mind between now and the introduction of the revised bill, it is difficult to see how the revised respective friends of labor and business in Congress could be induced to abide by the tacit truce. It would be remarkable if they did.
Most of the serious controversies which have arisen under 7-A turned upon the method of determining labor's representatives in collective bargaining. Business, as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce, has held that each employee can choose his own representative, or choose to be represented by himself, or not represented.
The American Federation holds that a majority of workers in a given plant should decide which union shall represent all. This view has been upheld by the National Labor Relations Board, and disputed by Richberg.

REPUTED DOUBLE OF HAUPTMANN

many last year, and one a handwriting expert.
Should the defense name Fisch as the author of the ransom notes, the State will call relatives of Fisch as rebuttal witnesses, one of the prosecuting attorneys said.

Attorney-General David T. Wil-lents said: "We will probably finish in a week because of the cooperation of the defense, which has not attempted to prolong the case."

Others to Support Osborn.
Osborn will return to the witness stand Monday to relate further his reasons for believing Hauptmann wrote all of the ransom notes, and to point out further similarities he says exist between Hauptmann's acknowledged samples of writing and that of the notes.

George K. Large, a special assistant Attorney General of the prosecution staff, said the state would not be content to rest on Osborn's testimony alone. Other experts who will be called to corroborate Osborn's opinion are: his son, Albert D. Osborn; H. J. Walters, of Chicago; C. C. Farrar of the U. S.
Treasury Department, Washington;
Clark Sellers, of San Francisco; Eldridge W. Stein, of New York, and Joseph Schultze, of Birmingham, Ala.

Robert Scanlon, of Menlo Park, said to bear a striking resemblance to Hauptmann and who is reported to have said he could testify he was in the woods near the Lindbergh estate near Hopewell and drove over Sourland Mountain roads about the time the kidnapping occurred, could not be found by either state or defense today. Attorneys for both sides said they would like to find him.

Nails in Ladder and Garage.
It is understood that the prosecution will present a witness who will testify that the same sort of nails used in making the Lindbergh kidnaper's ladder were used in the building of Hauptmann's garage in the Bronx. Nails of the same sort were in a keg and in the pockets of overalls found in the garage, this witness is reported to say.

Reports that Violet Sharpe, former Morrow housemaid who committed suicide, was seen in Tonkers, N. Y., the night of the kidnapping, were investigated by Albert Albrecht, New Jersey State Trooper, and Sergeant William Grangecker, of the New York Police Homicide squad. Mrs. Anna Bonesteel, 40 years old, proprietor of a lunch room at the Yonkers Ferry told them that Miss Sharpe had been pointed out to her sometime before by Augusta Reimer, a maid from Alpine, N. J. Miss Sharpe paced nervously along the ferry platform on the night of March 1, 1932, covering a blanket. Mrs. Bonesteel said and subsequently left in an automobile with two men.

To Reappoint Trenchard.
Harold Hoffman, Governor-elect of New Jersey, who will take office Tuesday, said he would call a special session of the Legislature in order to re-appoint Justice Thomas W.
Trenchard, presiding at the Hauptmann trial. Trenchard's term expires Jan. 20 and the regular legislative session is set for Jan. 21.

Carefully guarded by Deputy Sheriffs, the Hauptmann jurors took a bus ride today over a route outlined for them by Justice Trenchard. The distance was about 30 miles.

INJUNCTION HITS HUEY LONG'S NEW LAW ON PENSIONS

Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, Opposing Statute to Benefit Discharged Employees, Gets Order.

By the Associated Press.
NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 12.—Federal District Court officials announced here today that an interlocutory injunction had been issued by the court restraining enforcement of the Huey Long dictated legislative act which authorizes state supervision of industrial pensions.

The order was directed against the State Attorney General, Gaston L. Porter, on a suit instituted by the Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, which operates an extensive refinery business in Baton Rouge, and the Standard Pipeline Co., an affiliate of Standard Oil.

Hearing on the company's application for a permanent injunction was set for Jan. 25 before a special three-judge federal court to be composed of two district judges and one circuit judge.

To protect discharged workers. The act, passed by the last session of the Louisiana legislature, provides for supervision of the pension system by a state committee and was declared by Long to be aimed at companies who "discharge employees a short time before they are eligible to receive pensions."

The Standard Oil Co. in its bill of complaint declared that enforcement of this law, act 19 of the third extraordinary session of 1934, would deprive them of their rights under the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution and would involve an immediate outlay of $1,000,000.

The company also claimed that the act was discriminatory in that it applies only to companies having pension systems and that it takes away from the employer the right to contract with employees on pension.

The bill of complaint stated that the oil company for many years had been engaged in the manufacture and sale of petroleum products in Louisiana and that it uses and operates more than $40,000,000 worth of real and personal property daily in the State, employing an average of more than 3000 men.

1516 Ex-Employees Affected.
The company said it now has 3761 employees entitled to pensions under the pension plan and 1516 more who would become eligible to pensions if the new law is permitted to remain on the statute books.

It claimed that its officers would be subjected to undue prosecution because of heavy penalties provided in the law.

The suit will be tried before Judge Wayne G. Borah and Judge John C. Dawkins, District Judges, and Judge Rufus E. Foster, Judge of the Circuit Court of this district.

SAAR VOTES TODAY, TERRITORY TENSE, OUTCOME IN DOUBT

demonstrations, meetings and speeches have been officially forbidden since Tuesday, the Deutsches front continuously broadcasts through Bavarian and Palatinate stations. At the same time, the radio news reports from Strasbourg, France, are blanketed regularly by unknown saboteurs.

Hitler's personal Saar commissioner, Burckel, continues his campaign of vituperation of the opposition, through the radio station in Kaiserslautern, in the neighboring Pfalz region. He denounces the Catholic Einheits (Unity) Front, especially charging that it is financed by the French.

Considered as Treason.

Burckel quoted the slogan of the Catholics, "Christ, not Hitler, is our Leader," and declared it to be "Judas' receipt for French money." Burckel has repeatedly declared that a vote for the status quo continued administration of the Saargebiet by the League of Nations will be considered as treason by the Nazis. Concentration camps, he has said, will face the "traitor" voters, and the scaffold will claim their leaders, when German sovereignty is re-established.

Picturing the horrors which war would inflict on the Saarland, Burckel declared, "A vote for the status quo is a call for war."

The Catholic newspaper General Anzeiger says that 1500 of Goering's secret Schutzpolizei have been ordered to the Saargebiet, to supervise the post-plebiscite reprisals.

If it were not so tragic for the Saarlanders, the Deutsches Front's campaign tactics would be comical. The territory is inundated with handbills displaying glaring falsehoods, intended to dishearten the opposition.

One of the handbills says that Imbusch, Braun, Hoffmann and Kunkel, who are the four horsemen of the Common (anti-Nazi) Front, have fled, deserting their followers. Another reports that Hoffmann has committed suicide. Others purport to tell of recantations by the leaders, and orders issued by them for dissolution of their groups. Even signatures have been forged.

Most of Papers Pro-Nazi.
Although 30 of the 35 Saar newspapers are outspokenly in support of the Deutsches Front, plainclothesmen of the Nazis daily assault the few newsmen handling opposition papers, and destroy their papers. They follow carriers from house to house, extracting newspapers from post-boxes on doorsteps.

Despite Berlin's instructions to avoid offending the Catholics, services of that church in several outlying villages are reported to have been interrupted and the priests insulted. A militant Protestant pastor warned his congregation to be prepared to see blood flow in the streets before the plebiscite is liquidated.

More than ever, the Catholics, who compose 72 per cent of the Saargebiet's 224,000 population, remain the unknown and determining factors. Even the priesthood, which at least outwardly is observing the Pope's admonition to neutrality, as well as Catholic trade unionists, admit the impossibility of predicting how the masses will vote.

"Duty of Good Catholic."
The statement of Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, that the Holy Father favors neither side, and that every Saar Catholic is entitled to vote according to his conscience, has been widely disseminated.

ated. More specific, however, was the counsel given to 40 Saar workers in a Papal audience, that "it is the duty of every good Catholic to be loyal to his country, but above all, to be loyal to his religion." This utterance has been hammered home incessantly by the two Catholic anti-Nazi newspapers.

The opposition also points out that the Bishop of Speyer, who, with the Bishop of Trier, has addressed timid letters of "Welcome back to the Fatherland" to Saar parishioners, was an ardent separatist in 1923.

Another illustration of the unreliability of signs is the hamlet of Puettingen, where, after the armistice, the 786 villagers unanimously petitioned for incorporation into Alsace-Lorraine. Today, Puettingen is professedly solid for the Deutsches Front.

Several hundred German-Americans, "guests" of the Fatherland, have the jitters over reports that they will lose the American citizenship if they vote. The case of Dorothea Eyderman, who came from Seattle, Wash., with her infant, is particularly pathetic. She says her husband provided a hard-earned $400 for her passage. The plebiscite commission refused her permission to vote, and the Nazis have refused to reimburse her for her expenses. A woman from Brazil is in a similar situation. Some of the pilgrims have become disillusioned, and there have been hints that they may turn the tables on the Nazis.

Hitler Center of Attack.

During the closing days of the campaign, the vital issues have been completely obscured. The opposition is centering its attacks on Hitler. The Arbeiter Zeitung, labor organ, prints a full-page view of "what the Saar newspapers will look like of the status quo is rejected." It shows a paper containing only official decrees concerning concentration camps, orders outlawing political and workers' organizations, confiscation of trade union funds, etc., issued since Hitler assumed office. It points out specifically the executions and downfall of many ex-Nazis, and recalls that many in the Saar, now Deutsches Fronters, were formerly separatists, pro-French and anti-Hitler.

Status quo leaders are arguing that, as the "free Saar" votes now, millions of brothers in the Fatherland will vote at their first opportunity. Heinrich Imbusch, Catholic leader and former Reichstag member, said to 1500 hardfaced miners at Burbach, in the last legal meeting, that the Fatherland anxiously awaited the free Saar's verdict.

The New Ford V-8 for 1935

A New Kind of Motor Car—Designed for Easy Riding

NEW SEAT POSITION NEW WEIGHT DISTRIBUTION NEW LONGER, MORE FLEXIBLE SPRINGS

In the New Ford V-8 for 1935, all the weight of car and passengers is correctly balanced and distributed. Seats are moved forward so that passengers on the rear seat ride nearer the center of the car. This, with new spring suspension, and longer and more flexible springs, gives new smoothness, ease and riding comfort on any kind of road.

For 1935, Ford has taken another revolutionary step forward. To the proved performance of the famous Ford V-8 engine has been added remarkable riding comfort. And the entire car has been clothed with a new and modern beauty, both inside and out.

The illustration on this page shows the distinctive modern lines of the New Ford V-8 for 1935. When you see the car in the showrooms or on the road you notice at once its larger size as well as its handsome appearance. It is longer, with more body room, more leg room and more baggage room. It is lower to the ground—easier to step in and out. The front seats are as much as 5 1/2 inches wider in some body types. The curved gear shift lever gives additional front-seat comfort.

NEW, LONGER SPRINGS OF UNUSUAL FLEXIBILITY

The springing of the New Ford V-8 for 1935 is entirely new. The springbase of the car (the distance from the front to the rear spring) is 123 inches, or eleven inches longer than the wheelbase. This has been accomplished by mounting the front spring in front of the front axle and the back spring in back of the rear axle. This design gives you increased comfort without sacrificing ease of handling.

Front and rear springs are longer and more flexible, with tapered leaves for the most effective spring action and quieter operation.

NEW FEATURES FOR SAFETY, COMFORT AND EASE OF HANDLING

See the New Ford V-8 at the showrooms of Ford dealers. They have many interesting things to tell you and show you about its outstanding V-8 performance and comfort, luxurious new upholstery and appointments, improved, quiet-stopping brakes, new easy-pressure clutch, easier steering, new rigid X-type frame, Clear-Vision Ventilation and the many other features of the car. All Ford V-8 cars for 1935 are equipped throughout with Safety Glass, at no additional cost. All have welded all-steel bodies.

UTTEN CALLED BIGGEST OF SPECULATIONS

government Attorneys Reads Hyde's Testimony
Urging Grain Speculation
Stop "Bear Raids"

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The government's plea that grain speculators be barred from exchanges was accepted today by the assertion that the biggest speculation in grain was being done by "bears."

Evidence that the Hoover administration was concerned with the activities of Cutten, Chicago broker, was laid before the committee which is investigating the charges against Leo F. Tierney, special attorney, read a statement from Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture, Jan. 25, 1930. Hyde asked the committee to desist from "bearing the public interest." The grain trader had helped many thousands of farmers in time of distress, by a less than six months. Hyde said Cutten had 7,725,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $7,338,000, and was "short" on most of his commitments. He said Cutten had 3,670,000 bushels of wheat in storage, and a telegram was sent, "Blames the Farm Bureau."

The reply of Cutten's attorney, the government's charges of "bearing the public interest" were responsible for the present in prices during the 1930 and 1931.

The Board, which had a $100,000 stabilization fund, was the "biggest speculation" Taylor shouted.

CUTTEN CALLED 'BIGGEST OF ALL SPECULATORS'

Government Attorney Reads Hyde's Telegram Urging Grain Man to Stop "Bear Raids."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. — The government's plea that Arthur H. Cutten be barred from the grain exchanges was accompanied today with the assertion that he is the biggest speculator in history.

Evidence that the Hoover administration was concerned over the activities of Cutten, Chicago grain broker, was laid before the grain futures commission which is hearing the charges against him.

Leo F. Tierney, special government attorney, read a telegram to Cutten from Arthur M. Hyde, Hoover's Secretary of Agriculture, on Feb. 25, 1930. Hyde asked the speculator to desist from "bear raids in the public interest." The Secretary told the grain trader that he could help many thousands of people in a time of distress, "by so doing."

Less than six months later, on June 24, 1930, Tierney said that Cutten held 7,725,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $7,338,000 and that he was "short" on most of the commitments. He said Cutten was short 3,670,000 bushels the day the Hyde telegram was sent.

Blames the Farm Board.

The reply of Cutten's attorney to government's charges of dealing in millions to club the market was that the Federal Farm Board is responsible for the steady decline in prices during frantic days in 1930 and 1931.

The Board, which had a $500,000 stabilization fund—said Cutten was the "biggest speculator in history," Taylor shouted.

He charged that Leslie Fitz, grain futures administration officer in Chicago, was responsible for Cutten's failure to report his deals to the government.

The Grain Futures Commission is composed of Secretary Wallace, Secretary Roper and Attorney-General Cummings. Should it find Cutten guilty of failing to report to the Grain Futures Administration, it has the power to bar him from trading on the Chicago Board of Trade and other exchanges.

Cutten, a millionaire, sat quietly through the closing arguments today. He whispered occasionally to his attorneys, folded his arms and watched the cabinet officers close.

Cutten "Not Informed."

Taylor agreed that some reports required by law were not sent to the Grain Futures Administration but asserted that Cutten was "not guilty." He said Fitz had neglected to inform Cutten that reports were necessary.

And also, he continued, Cutten was not guilty of making false and fraudulent reports.

"Mr. Cutten knows nothing about bookkeeping and nothing about reporting," he said.

Taylor blamed the errors on an unidentified "young lady" who acted as bookkeeper for Cutten.

Secretary Roper commented that he found nothing in the law or "regulations" that required Fitz to tell Cutten to make reports.

Hyde's telegram recalled that President Hoover, himself, denounced grain speculators in July, 1931, and said it they desired recovery they would "desist from their manipulations."

Decision on Cutten's case is expected about Feb. 15. Cutten has the right to appeal to the courts if the commission rules against him.

GOTTLIEB VON JAGOW.

VON JAGOW, FORMER GERMAN MINISTER, DIES

Once Blamed by Ex-Kaiser for Responsibility for World War.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Jan. 12.—The death of Gottlieb von Jagow, who at the outbreak of the World War conducted Germany's foreign affairs under Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, was announced today.

He was 71 years old and had been in retirement since 1916.

Von Jagow, German Foreign Secretary at the outbreak of the World War, was born on June 22, 1863, in Berlin. He entered the diplomatic service in 1895 and after having been Prussian Minister at Munich, German Ambassador at Rome and German Minister at The Hague, was appointed in 1913 Foreign Secretary. He played an active part in the negotiations preceding the outbreak of the World War, and was, in particular, concerned in the German relations with Austria, having been the first member of the Imperial Government in Berlin to become acquainted with the terms of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia. In 1919 he wrote a defense of the German policy.

Von Jagow was once blamed by Kaiser Wilhelm for the World War. The German Government's policy, said the ex-Kaiser in 1918, was conducted by Von Jagow and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg alone during the last weeks before the outbreak of hostilities.

D. LEROY MORGAN ABANDONS
E. ST. LOUIS MAYORALTY RACE

One of Three Leading Candidates says He Opposes Contest Between "Lifelong Democrats."

D. Leroy Morgan, East St. Louis real estate dealer, withdrew yesterday as a candidate for Mayor of East St. Louis, subject to the primary Feb. 12 and the election April 2.

He was considered one of the three leading candidates, the others being the Mayor, James T. Crow, who is running for re-election on the Administration ticket, and John T. English, who is supported by Dan McGlynn.

In announcing his withdrawal Morgan issued a statement which said, in part: "Although this election is non-partisan, it seems un-sportsmanlike for two lifelong Democrats such as John English and myself to be opposing each other. Mr. English has been successful in securing the support I had hoped to receive and is probably more able to handle the financial requirements of the campaign."

The other candidates are Ray Schumacher, 22 years old, Charles C. Kelley, butcher, and William Z. Lipe, organizer of the unemployed.

JURY VERDICT FOR COMPANY IN WORKER'S $35,000 SUIT

Walenta Turek Sought Damages, Contending He Contracted Occupational Disease at Plant.

A verdict in favor of the National Pigment Co., 1 Sidney street, was returned by a jury in Circuit Judge Kirkwood's court yesterday in the suit of Walenta Turek, 44 years old, 3209 South Ninth street, who sought $35,000 damages on account of an occupational disease.

Turek alleged he contracted dust in his lungs while employed as a laborer by the company between August, 1927, and March, 1934, as a result of which he was unable to work. He contended his employer failed to provide adequate respirators for use of employees, as required by law.

The company denied it had not complied with the law. John S. Marsalek, attorney for the firm, asserted the evidence failed to establish that Turek contracted the ailment at the plant.

Another defense was that Turek should have made his claim before the Missouri Workmen's Compensation Commission, which he failed to do. The time has expired for Turek to present a claim to the commission.

TWO WIVES AGREE TO PROSECUTE MAN FOR BIGAMY

Meet for First Time When No. 2 Becomes Suspicious and Has Ralph R. Billingsley Arrested.

The two wives of Ralph R. Billingsley, 23-year-old chauffeur, met for the first time yesterday and agreed to prosecute him. After each had told her story, Assistant Circuit Attorney Murphy issued a warrant charging Billingsley with bigamy.

Mrs. Bengta Olson Billingsley, who has light hair and blue eyes, said she and Billingsley were married Aug. 24, 1929. They have two children, Delores, 4, and Ralph Jr., 8 months old. Billingsley, chauffeur for a retired merchant, was frequently absent from their home, 5435 Lee avenue, West Walnut Manor, while on trips with his employer. She, therefore, did not become suspicious when he stayed away for three days last month.

Wife No. 2, Miss Katherine Calderon, 28-year-old divorcee, who has dark hair and dark eyes, said she met Billingsley, whom she knew as Ralph Travis, about five months ago. They were married Dec. 15 at Waterloo, Ill.

After a brief honeymoon at a West End hotel she returned to her home at 2206 North Ninth street, where she lives with her mother. Billingsley called on her infrequently, explaining, she said, that he was busy. One evening he took her to the apartment of his employer, during the latter's absence, and they had food and drinks. On Christmas he gave her $5. She became suspicious, and learned that Ralph Travis was really Ralph R. Billingsley and that he was already married. Billingsley, arrested Friday, made a statement admitting the charges, police said. His first wife told officers he contributed but small sums to her and the children, and that she was forced to seek aid from relief agencies.

$2,795,000 FORECLOSURE SUIT FILED AGAINST WIRT FRANKLIN

Bank Says Oklahoma City Oil Man Has Defaulted on Loans Made in 1931.

By the Associated Press. OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Jan. 12.—Foreclosure of mortgages totaling $2,795,218 and appointment of a receiver for certain properties are sought in a suit filed against Wirt Franklin, Oklahoma City oil man, and a number of other defendants today.

The First National Bank and Trust Co. alleges that Franklin, acting as an individual, incurred the obligations in 1931. Income of properties pledged to retire the loans has been insufficient and the payments have been in default for some time, the bank's petition says.

HAS THEORY ON SHAKESPEARE

French Scholar Says Bard Went Abroad for Material.

By the Associated Press. NERAC, France, Jan. 12.—A theory that Shakespeare traveled abroad to gather material for his works and did not, as generally believed, rely on information gleaned from other authors, has been advanced by the French scholar, Matthias Morhardt.

Morhardt quoted several passages from "Love's Labor Lost," in support of his argument, before the Congress of Writers on Aquitaine. The English bard, Morhardt contended, visited France and especially Nebrac, since all the characters in the play are faithful portraits of French nobility of his day who frequented the town. He said he had no difficulty in identifying Biron as Charles de Gothen and Boyet as Guy de Faure de Gothen, the Queen's Chancellor in Shakespeare's day.

CONVICT QUESTIONS ACCUSER IN COLUMBIA (MO.) KILLINGS

George McKeever Held for Trial on Charge of Murdering Two Officers.

By the Associated Press. COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 12.—George McKeever, a North Dakota convict, accused of killing two officers here June 14, 1933, turned cross-examiner at his preliminary hearing here today. McKeever, 33 years old, was bound over for trial, at the hearing at which he confronted another who allegedly confessed the crime, implicating McKeever.

McKeever began firing questions at Francis McNelly, a farm hand who was arrested on a farm near Allerton, Ia. They are accused of killing Sheriff Roger Wilson of Boone County and Sergt. Ben Booth of the State Highway Patrol when the officers halted a motor car at the outskirts of Columbia to question the occupants about a bank holdup at Mexico, Mo.

"Why did you name my brother, Eloy McKeever, as your accomplice when you were first arrested?" McKeever asked.

"Because the whole story leaked out—was discovered—and I wanted to protect you," McNelly said. "Isn't it true you wanted to separate my brother from your sister?" McKeever asked.

"Yes," McNelly answered, dropping his head. Eloy McKeever is McNelly's brother-in-law.

W. L. MASON INDORSED APPROVES NEW SETUP FOR ALDERMANIC HEAD FOR MILLINERY FIRM

Lawyer Agreed on by Democratic Leaders as Candidate for Nomination.

U. S. Judge Davis Authorizes Reorganization of Baer, Sternberg & Cohen.

William L. Mason, lawyer, has been agreed on by principal Democratic leaders as a candidate for the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen, Chairman Hannegan of the Democratic City Committee announced yesterday.

The agreement was reached at a recent meeting in Mayor Dickmann's office, attended by the Mayor, Hannegan, President Igou of the Police Board, Chairman Waech-ter of the Election Board, Mason, Marion C. Early, lawyer and friend of the Mayor, and others. Hannegan expressed the opinion that the Democratic City Committee would be unanimous in support of Mason.

McDaniel Out of Race.
Lawrence McDaniel, former Circuit Attorney, who had been offered support of some party leaders not particularly friendly with the Mayor, is he would run for the Democratic nomination for the al-dermanic presidency, announced Friday that he would not enter the race.

Jesse McDonald, lawyer and close adviser of the Mayor, who had been promised the backing of the same group of leaders now favoring Mason, has not announced definitely that he would not run for this nomination. However, news that Mason would be the candidate was interpreted at City Hall as eliminating McDonald. He had expressed doubt that he could devote the time necessary to the work.

Some time ago, John J. Nangle, lawyer, insurance company executive and another friend of the Mayor, had declined to run. There have been two other possible Democratic candidates for the place as head of the Board of Aldermen.
They are John P. Collins, Nineteenth Ward Alderman, now vice-president and majority leader of the board, and Emmett Golden, Twenty-seventh Ward Alderman, former vice-president of the board.

Collins to Decide by Tuesday.
Collins said he would decide by Tuesday whether to enter the contest. Golden has the campaign under consideration. He would look for the support of City Marshal

A reorganization plan for Baer, Sternberg & Cohen, Inc., millinery manufacturers, 321 North Fourteenth street, was approved by Federal Judge Davis yesterday. The company, which controls 400 retail stores, asked for reorganization under the amended bankruptcy law last November.

The plan reduces the capital stock to $200,000 with a new issue of 100,000 shares at $2. Stockholders will exchange their present holdings for the new stock at the following ratios: One first preferred, of which 2750 are outstanding at $100 par, for 12 new; one second preferred, of which 3000 are outstanding at $100 par, for two and one-half new; one Class A, of which 14,700 are outstanding, no par, for one-half new; 100 common, of which 68,136 are outstanding and which sold as high as $5 a share at one time, for one new.

A stockholders' committee reported to the court Wednesday that between 77 and 93 per cent of the various classes of stockholders approved the plan. It was testified at the hearing that the present book value of the company is $194, 000, and it was estimated that a forced sale would realize not more than 15 per cent of the book value.

from Hon. Sparks of East St. Louis, Ill., to McAlester, pleaded guilty before Federal Commissioner Layden here yesterday.

His ward and an appointee of the Mayor.

Mason is 58 years old, resides at 5 Parkland place, and has offices in the International Office Building. He was a candidate for a Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge in the primary last August, but failed of nomination, running eleventh in the field, with nine to be chosen.

Walter J. G. Neun (Rep.), whose term as aldermanic president will expire in April, will not seek re-election. No candidate for the Republican nomination has been announced. The last day for filing is Feb. 25. The primary will be March 8.

FOR LARGER FEDERAL CONTROL OF OIL, COAL

Committee Predicts Shortage of Former Product in 15 Years—Favors Price-Fixing.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—An extension of Federal control over the bituminous coal and other mineral industries to provide for fixing both minimum and maximum prices was recommended today by the Mineral Policy Committee of the National Resources Board, which predicted a shortage of oil within 15 years.

Save for coal, however, the committee said it favored "retention of the system of private operation" of the mineral industries "with Government supervision when necessary."

An exception to the policy of no general extension of public ownership may be advisable in the special case of bituminous coal, in which a proposal for the purchase of the industry is being considered.

of selected acreage as a means of controlling capacity deserves serious consideration," the report said. "Such a national coal reserve would be leased as needed with payment of royalty to the United States."

The control of output or capacity of the mineral industries through a central supervising agency was suggested but the report said the bituminous coal and petroleum industries would require separate legislation.

The report was drafted before the Supreme Court decision which invalidated section 9-C of the National Industrial Recovery Act under which the Government attempted to regulate oil production.

The committee mentioned the attempt to regulate petroleum output by State compacts but made no comment on specific plans other than to demand a method "that will minimize waste of oil, gas and reservoir energy and thus extend the life of our limited supply."

The group said maximum prices should be determined by a cost-finding body as protection to consumers. The committee emphasized the importance of mineral exports, and advised that American companies be allowed to participate in international cartels. It suggested restrictions on imports which might lead to surplus production, but said no special concessions in freight rates or shipping subsidies should be made.

Regulation of the export of scrap mineral and such metals as would be useful in war, and establishment of war reserves of imported minerals essential for national defense, was advocated.

Among the members of the Mineral Policy Committee are Secretary of the Interior, Ickes, Leon Henderson, the NIRA director of oil, search and planning; Herbert Feis, State Department economist and F. A. Silcox, Forest Service Director.

Truck Which Tied Up Municipal Bridge Traffic

TRAFFIC over the Municipal Bridge became congested for several hours yesterday afternoon after a truck overturned at the Missouri end, leaving only a single traffic line open on a busy afternoon. Six policemen were assigned to direct delayed motorists.

OVERTURNED TRUCK DELAYS MUNICIPAL BRIDGE TRAFFIC

Load of Dressed Hogs Shifts, Throwing Vehicle on Side; Lanes Tied Up for Hours.

A five-ton truck of the Swift Packing Co. overturned at 1:30 p. m. yesterday at the Missouri entrance to Municipal Bridge and for several hours delayed traffic over the bridge in both directions.

Nine policemen directed the east and westbound traffic through narrow lanes on either side of the truck. Eastbound motorists were required to drive over the south sidewalk in order to proceed. Westbound traffic was lined double to the east entrance of the bridge.

The truck, carrying a shipment of dressed hogs, was driven by Louis Protheroe, 26 years old, 4600 Washington avenue. Protheroe told police he made a left turn onto the bridge from Seventh street, and the weight of the load shifted, causing the truck to turn over. He was taken to City Hospital for treatment.

ART CHESTER, GLENVIEW, ILL., ALL-AMERICAN SPEED WINNER

Takes Venezuelan Trophy With Tiny Plane at Average Rate of 220 Miles an Hour.

By the Associated Press. MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 12.—The Venezuelan trophy, chief prize of the All-American air meet here, was captured today by Art Chester of Glenview, Ill., who sent a tiny plane of his own design skidding about the pylons of a 15-mile course for an average speed of 220.255 miles an hour.

Just before Chester's dash, Ben Stegall of Savannah, Ga., roaring three times around the five-mile triangular course, flew his plane for an average of 165.269 miles an hour, to win an all-American free-for-all event and $200 in prize money.

Alton B. Sterman of Cape Cod, Mass., considerably behind the victorious Georgia, was second with an average speed of 140.528 miles an hour, and Roger Don Rae of Lansing, Mich., third, with 132.737 miles an hour.

Sherman collected $100; Rae, $75; H. Doyle of Erie, Pa., fourth, prize money of $50, and Jack Loessing of Miami, $25 for fifth position.

Jack Wright of Utica, N. Y., who established new speed times here last year, finished second, but was disqualified for cutting a pylon. Wright, however, came back to win a speed dash limited to commercial cabin planes with engine displacement of 550 cubic inches or less, three laps over the five-mile course.

Wright's average speed was 140.658, and he won $150. Doyle, who raced plane-and-plane with Wright much of the way, was flagged down for second place. His average was 133.978 and prize $100.

TWO DIE AFTER FIGHT AT CHURCH IN MEXICO

Seven Others Reported in Grave Condition; Priests Incited Clash, Paper Says.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO, D. F., Jan. 12. — Two townspeople wounded in the religious clash at Tacubaya said by a newspaper to have been incited by the Catholic clergy, died late today in a hospital and two others of seven injured were reported in a grave condition. Reports of other deaths were circulated but unconfirmed.

The newspaper El Nacional, which supports the Government, charged that Catholic clergy "deliberately incited the people to acts of sedition" planned last night's outbreak in the suburb. The newspaper alleged five persons were killed in the fighting, that three bodies were in a hospital and two others carried off secretly.

Police and hospitals denied the reports prior to the announcement.

of the deaths of two of the wounded. Five of the injured suffered from bullet wounds and four were hit by stones.

Crowds contained to gather in front of the Catholic church where the trouble started, but a detachment of police maintained order all day.

A number of women who were arrested last night were set free on orders from President Cardenas, but 55 men, held as the instigators, were consigned to the Federal authorities.

Chicago Prisoner Traced Through Hat Dropped in Robbery at East Moline, Ill.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Frank Kelly, 19 years old, confessed tonight, police say, that he took part in the holdup of a tavern in East Moline, Ill., Oct. 17, in which Mrs. Veronica Cadestecker, 65, was beaten to death.

Kelly was connected with the murder through a hat dropped by one of three men who took part in the holdup.

The Detective Bureau announced that Kelly named Russell Faragoi, 20 years old, one of the four others arrested with him, as a companion in the holdup.

KANSAS STUDENT LOSES FIGHT AGAINST MILITARY TRAINING

Court Refuses to Enjoin State College From Requiring Him to Take Course.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 12.—Judge Otis E. Hunsate denied today the application of Raymond McMahon, Kansas State College student, for an order to enjoin school authorities from requiring him to take military training while enrolled as a student in veterinary medicine.

McMahon had objected to being compelled to take military training at the school, a land-grant college, on the ground that he had conscientious scruples against it. He contended he was discriminated against because he had to attend the college to enroll for the course he desired, and that in requiring him to take military training the board of regents was violating the State constitutional exemption provided for those objecting to bearing arms because of religious or conscientious scruples.

Judge Hunsate ruled there was no Federal or State constitutional provision prohibiting the State of Kansas from making military training compulsory at the college; that the board of regents had the power to make the training compulsory at the school; and that it could expel a student for not complying with requirements.

18 LAUNDRIES TO CUT DAMP WASH RATES 1-2C A POUND

Announced Purpose Is to Compete With Home Laundress and Washing Machine.

Eighteen laundries have announced a reduction in the price of damp wash work from 5 cents to 3½ cents a pound, explaining that they are seeking to compete with the home laundress and the washing machine.

The new price, effective tomorrow, carries a 49-cent minimum and includes pickup and delivery service. A spokesman for the laundries stated that there is no intention of precipitating a price war laundries in Milwaukee and Kansas City recently made a similar reduction, according to the spokesman, and were rewarded by an appreciable increase in business.

The 18 laundries are also advertising a finished price on shirts of 10 cents each, as compared with 15 and 18 cents, including pickup and delivery.

Sum of half: De Paul 35, St. Louis 25.
 Officials: Reeder-Orr (Iowa State).
 Umpire: J. H. H. 12-1.

By James M. Gould

Two great college basketball teams collided here last night and the collision showed that one was considerably greater than the other when DePaul University of Chicago defeated the St. Louis University Billikens by a score of 35 to 25. About 1200 persons saw one of the flashiest games of the season for, though the margin of victory was one of 10 points, it was a battle all the way and, at one stage of the second half, the Billikens held a two-point advantage.

The hero of the game was a substitute DePaul sophomore center, Dick Yost. The regular center, Diduch, six feet four, committed two fouls early in the game and was removed. It proved a fortunate move by Coach Jimmy Kelly for Yost, from his first appearance on the floor dominated the scoring. He was high man for the evening with 13 points on six field goals and a free throw and scored five of his baskets in the second half just when they Bill Cochran Stars on Defense.

For St. Louis, Bill Cochran, guard, was a standout on defense. His work under the basket when his team was hard pressed was a revelation of speed and "follow upness." Captain Dirksen of the Billikens was high man for his team with eight points.

DePaul had everything—height, speed and remarkable passing ability. Now and then the DePaul players would roll the ball to a teammate. When they passed, the ball went straight to its mark and they were veritable magicians when it came to snaring the ball in the air out of the hands of their

It was the 24th victory for DePaul in the last 25 games the team has played. Last year, they won 17 games without a defeat.

Both teams opened carefully but a field goal and a free throw gave DePaul the first blood. Then, Dirksen scored and two free throws by Fash put the Billikens one-up. Long shots helped DePaul to a 9-6 lead at which time Diduch was taken from the floor when he committed his second foul. Yost immediately made his presence felt with a nice basket and both sides were in a scoring mood for the next two minutes. St. Louis crept to with-

The Billikens made a great stand when the teams resumed play. Flanagan, Bill Cochran and Dirksen collaborated in a seven-point flurry which put the Billikens up, 19 to 17. Then Yost began to get busy. He tied the count at 19-19, again.

CARDINALS TO PLAY TWO

20 CONTESTS IN SOUTH; BATTERY MEN LIKELY TO LEAVE FEB. 25

Dizzy's Cousin? Why, Old Diz Never Heard of Jack

If Jack Dean is a cousin of the pitching Deans, he will have to wheel out the family tree and prove it beyond peradventure of doubt. He may have taken kindly to the idea of being of the same stock as the two boys who pitched the Cardinals to the 1934 world championship, but Dizzy takes a different slant at the situation.

The following telegram was received by the Post-Dispatch last night from the Great Dizzy:

"Jack Dean absolutely no relationship to me. Never heard of him before 1934, immediately after the world series. Me and Paul are the only Pitching Deans. He can't talk his way into the big leagues and get by on my reputation. He's got to be able to pitch. Give my regards to Hornsby, the big semi-pro. DIZZY DEAN."

By J. Roy Stockton.

Frankie Frisch's Cardinals will journey to Cuba for two games with the Havana All-Stars and play a total of 26 spring exhibition contests, according to the training schedule made public last night by Secretary Clarence Lloyd. Twenty-two of the games will be with major league opposition, the only contest with bush leaguers being the two at Havana, one with the Rochester club at Bartow and one with Columbus at Avon Park.

Six of the contests will be with the Browns at Sportsman's Park, constituting the final phase of the spring training program. There will be four meetings with the Giants, three at Miami Beach and one at Bradenton; home and home games with the Phillies, Athletics, Red Sox, Tigers and Yankees; and single games with the Braves and Reds.

The schedule shows open dates between April 1, the date of the 6th opening of the spring season, and the Browns, and Lloyd is at work now arranging the barnstorming itinerary. The four games will be played on the way home, according to present plans.

No date has been set for the departure of the first Cardinal squad, but it is likely that pitchers, catchers and young players will report at Bradenton Monday, Feb. 25, with the regular infielders and outfielders due at camp a week later.

The spring schedule follows:

March 6—All-Stars at Havana.
March 10—Phillies at Bradenton.
March 12—Athletics at Bradenton.
March 13—Giants at Miami Beach.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—A spectator at a baseball game assumed the risks connected with the sport, Circuit Judge Chalmers C. Taylor ruled today in dismissing a $10,000 damage suit against the Chicago National League baseball club.

John Mueller, 28, alleged in his suit that on July 28, 1929, in his ball room at the Don Hurst, at Philadelphia National League club, he struck and broke his right cheek bone.

Three victories in the past week have enabled the St. Louis Flyers to make up the ground they lost in the American Hockey Association race on their recent northern trip when they lost three in one.

They met Kansas City at the Winter Garden tonight and a victory would enable them to be within two points of the leading Oilers.

Kansas City is in third place, three full games behind the Flyers, and although the Greyhounds have been rather successful in games with the St. Louis club this season, Flyers can't win five contests, Kansas City can't win five contests, Kansas City can't win five contests.

Boys of 13 Nationalities Will Fight for Crowns In Amateur Boxing Meet

By W. J. McGoogan.

The who's who of more than 60 boys enrolled in the Post-Dispatch boxing school discloses that there are 13 nationalities represented in the group with those who claim American for their nationality leading with 18.

The boys probably misunderstood what was wanted, for although America has as many boys as any other country, the trainers resented them. Of the rest of the nationalities represented were: Irish, 10; Jewish, 4; Italian, 1; Italian, 9; German, 7; Irish-Dutch, 1; Irish-French, 1; Polish, 1; Slav, 1; Scotch, 2.

These boys, between 16 and 21 years of age, are students at various schools throughout the city and working youngsters.

Nearly all of them state they joined the school for physical development or for fun and very few declare that they have ambitions to become professional boxers.

Also many of the boys follow other lines of athletics, particularly football, baseball and soccer.

There remain in the school, after about three months of training, places on the teams which will represent the five communities in the elimination contests at Sherman Park Thursday and Friday, after which the semifinals and finals will be contested at the Arena.

The boys were divided into two groups, recently, with half training at Sherman Park under Benny Kessler, and the other half at Mullapahy with Harry Kessler as the instructor. Today they will all gather at Sherman Park at 2 p. m. with about five hours of boxing from the ring as the last row of the first.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Rules to protect thousands of high school football players from injury, or possible fatalities, were formulated today by the Rules Committee of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations.

"Safety first" was foremost in the two-day deliberations of the committee, which governs 15,000 high school football fatalities among scholastic players of the nation, have increased during the last four years, the committee was of the opinion that the number can be reduced.

These important rulings were made.

Compulsory wearing of head gear.

When a foul occurs on the last down of a period, both teams may be liable to a penalty. Formerly the defensive team was liable.

Revision of the "unnecessary roughness" clause of the rules so as to provide greater safety for the forward passer after the ball has left his hands.

Another change was made in the optional rule extending the forward pass was touched by an ineligible player in the area between the 10-yard line and the goal line.

CITY AND COUNTY STATE BOARD TO COACHES TO FORM DECIDE ON DOG UNITS OF STATE RACING QUESTION ASSOCIATION AT BRAVES' FIELD

By Harold Tuthill.

Formation of St. Louis and St. Louis County District High School coaches' associations in line with similar organizations all over the state will take place next Wednesday night at the Kings-Way Hotel, starting at 7:30 o'clock, it was learned last night. Only coaches and their assistants are eligible to attend.

Raymond G. Polster of Beaumont is temporary chairman of the St. Louis district and Millard M. Halter, who has a like office in the county. These men were appointed at a meeting in December called by Bert E. Fenenga, vice-president of the Missouri State High School Coaches' Association. Whether Polster and Halter will be elected chairmen will be determined by a vote at the Wednesday meeting.

Approved by State Body.

Carl Burris, secretary of the Missouri State High School Association, will be one of the principal speakers of the evening. When asked whether this new organization met with the approval of the State High School Association, Burris said that it did and that the association approved of the High School Association's action.

Burris also stated that the method of conducting the high school basketball tournament will be changed. Formerly the schools competed in district and subdistrict tournaments, but this means has been discarded in favor of regional tournaments. One from each of the 16 regions in Missouri will be chosen to compete in the finals at Columbia the second week in March.

Two regions in Area.

The St. Louis region will be divided into two regions, but which schools will be in one region and which in another is something that will be determined by the St. Louis District Committee. St. Charles probably will be included in the St. Louis region. Whatever division is made of the schools, it must be held jointly.

Basketball will be one of the items on the program Wednesday. The football and track situations also will come in for their share of criticism. At present Missouri operates under the National Collegiate Athletic Association football rules, which prohibit forward passes less than five yards behind the line of scrimmage and only permits the out-of-bounds ball to be brought back and put in play 10 yards in from the side-line.

Differences in Rules.

Although the State High School Athletic Association is a member of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations, the rules of the last organization are not used in football. These rules permit forward passes anywhere along the line of scrimmage and state that the ball may be brought 15 yards from the side-line after the ball has gone out of bounds. Of course, there are other differences in the rules of the two organizations, but those are the problem of the coaches as being the biggest matter to face.

A poll is being taken by the Missouri State Association to determine which organization the coaches would prefer and Burris stated that he received 82 per cent in favor of switching to the rules of the present N. C. A. A.

Change in Hurdles Likely.

Another topic that will be discussed Wednesday is a move to lower the height of the high hurdle in track.

According to Polster, the purpose of the organization of the city and county coaches in conjunction with the State Association is to bring to the attention of the coaches those athletic conditions which will be the benefit to the state and mutual coaches to join the association.

Federation Makes Three Rule Changes.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—The final word on dog racing at Braves Field is going to be said by the Massachusetts Racing Commission and by the directors of the National League, who have had much to say about the subject.

Proof that this harassing matter has been taken out of baseball hands came today when the Boston Kennel Club, Inc., filed an application to conduct dog racing at Braves Field, which it obtained by sub-lease from the Commonwealth National League, owners of the park.

Beyond admitting that the kennel club had obtained the lease, the consent of the baseball club, President Emil Fuchs of the Braves refused to comment.

The plans that accompanied the kennel club's application called for a track of from three-sixteenths of an inch to a mile, the building of which would require so much sub-lease from the Commonwealth National League, owners of the park.

Fuchs has stated that he has not discussed transferring his team's home games to Fenway Park with General Manager Eddie Collins of the Braves, but he has let it be known that the Red Sox would welcome the Braves as a tenant.

The Braves' tieup with the reality of the club has a long lease on Fenway, because of its recent lease, the full rental prices. If the reality of the club has a long lease on Fenway, because of its recent lease, the full rental prices.

Has Never Opposed Stein.

Frances Josephine Odell Wed To David E. Hartman; Ceremony At the Home of Bride's Parents

WEARING her mother's wedding gown of heavy cream-colored satin, and rose point lace which had been in her family for generations, Miss Frances Josephine Odell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Odell, 4914 Argyle place, was married yesterday afternoon to David E. Hartman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Hartman of Webster Groves. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Odell in the presence of 75 young friends of the couple. The bride party walked through a ribbon aisle to a candle-lit altar of white blossoms where the service was read by the Rev. Walter Tucker of Webster Groves, assisted by the Rev. L. A. Leahy, S. J.

The bride was preceded by her twin sister, Miss Linda Crist Odell, as maid of honor, and by another sister, Mrs. Richard Duncan Mathewson of Pittsburgh; Miss Claire Hartman, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Laura Gray. They were gowned alike in monk's robes of crushed crepe with loose sleeves and metal cord belts with long tassels. Miss Linda Odell wore dull blue, and the bridesmaids' gowns were chartreuse green. Monk's collars encircled the high neck lines, and the severely cut skirts terminated in short trains. They carried spring blossoms, those of the maid of honor tied with silver to harmonize with her belt and slippers, and those of the bridesmaids in gold.

The wedding gown, after the fashion of 25 years ago, was finished with elaborate detail. Seams were concealed by fine hand embroidery. Rose point lace formed a panel down the length of the princess skirt and edged the semi-square neckline. The sleeves were puffs of tulle banded at intervals with lace, and a heavy square train fell from a bow of lace at the waist. A rose point lace veil that has adorned many brides in the Odell family and which Mrs. Mathewson used a year ago, was worn by yesterday's bride from a cap of her mother's lace and a spray of orange blossoms. She carried white lilies. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, the gift of Mr. Hartman.

A reception followed, the guests including Mr. Odell's mother, Mrs. Benjamin B. Odell, widow of former Gov. Odell of New York, and Mrs. Odell's aunt, Miss Leila Ramsdell, both of Newburgh on the Hudson. Mrs. Odell served her guests in a gown of king's blue crepe trimmed with a girdle of cerise velvet and rhinestone clips fastened at the neck. Her flowers were gardenias. Mrs. Hartman was in turquoise blue crepe fashioned with a wide white sash.

Blair Boyle Presented to Society At Dinner Dance at Country Club

THE St. Louis Country Club was the scene of the next to last debut of the season Friday night. At a dinner dance for about 150 guests, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Boyle, 25 Lenox place, presented to society their second daughter, Miss Blair Boyle.

Miss Mary Boyle, Miss Blair's oldest sister, who came out two seasons ago, received with the debutante and her parents in the east room of the club. This was adorned with baskets of pink and red roses, snapdragons and other floral gifts. Miss Boyle was gown in white moire made on lines of classic simplicity. A shirred back panel lent fullness to the skirt, which was slit above the ankles in the center front, and terminated in a demi-train. The square neckline in front was repeated with lower décolletage in back. A large rhinestone ornament which secured the high girle in front was the only trimming on the gown, with which Miss Boyle wore a chain of small pearls and a sheaf of gardenias. She also carried a corsage of orchids. Her shoes were low-heeled sandals of white fallé.

Miss Mary Boyle wore a navygold yellow dress of rough crepe made on clinging lines with a draped cowl in the back. It was trimmed with rhinestone and emerald clips at the shoulder and a similar buckle at the waist. Her shoulder corsage was of orchids.

Junior League To Revive Follies Production For First Time Since Its Rollicking Success in 1922

THE curtain is going up again on the Junior League Follies for the first time since 1922. The announcement, made Friday, will recall to older members of the league Miss Gloria Geisinger's performance as an Australasian siren and the whimsicality of Winston Jones as Mr. Pin passing by. To younger members it promises opportunities for exotic tangos with the man of the hour, whose charms of paint and footlights are sure to enhance. Spectators and patrons may look forward again to a show in which the abandon of the performers more than compensates for their lack of talent.

The proposal, made at Friday's meeting by Mrs. Donaldson Lamher, president of the league, that the erstwhile "provisional" members would be expected to proselyte their masculine friends, met with enthusiasm. Someone was heard to remark that "getting the young men into the show would not be as hard as keeping the old men out."

Once upon a time the young men did not mind being drafted into service. The chorus of the 1922 follies numbered in its personnel such eligible beaux as John B. O'Day, J. Mahlon Wallace, Cupples Scudger, Noel Carpenter, Garneau Weid, William McCandless, Leicester Faust, and Clarence Maloy. Among the "sixteen syncopated silens in a snappy succession of startling steps" were Miss Audrey Faust, Miss Frances West, Miss Lucy Butler, Miss Elise Garneau, Miss Juliette Reyburn and Mrs. Harry Potter. Mrs. Potter stopped the show with her ballad, "I'm So Wild About Harry." Another high spot of the revue—given three performances—was the languid lament by Mrs. George Wendling who wandered across the stage, lily in hand, singing a song called "Wondering." Mrs. Dan Jones was long applauded for her "Wow" song and dance number. Mrs. Ellis Fischel, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Brashear, and George O'Neill contributed lyrics and tunes to the last burlesque.

No talent has yet been enlisted for the forthcoming attraction which with typical box-office extravagance promises to be the greatest Junior League Follies of all. The date of the production is still uncertain, although it is tentatively scheduled for some time after Easter. The place is still more uncertain. It will depend to some extent on the general scale of the production and on how far beads formed the gown worn by Mrs. Boyle. The back was cut to a low V accented by a rhinestone pin. The debutante table, with places for more than 100 guests, was set in the private dining room with the stage seated along the inside of the large U. Centerpieces of pink roses alternated with heavy wrought candleabra as decorations. Several of the candlesticks, part of Mrs. Boyle's collection of art objects, were of the ornate period of Louis XV, and others were in the Renaissance style. They held short white tapers.

In the main dining room, Miss Mary Boyle entertained a group of the older girls and their escorts, and a small table was set for friends of the host and hostess.

An orchestra and bar provided diversified entertainment in this room. The musicians were seated behind screens of silver cloth, and silver figures in the attitudes of polo players decorated the buffet. The chandeliers throughout the club were covered with pink shades and smilax.

Although she waited until after the rush of the holidays had subsided to make her debut, Miss Boyle has been the recipient of many favors this season. ## College Sororities and Fraternities

Panhellenic

ALUMNAE members of national sororities are busy with plans for the seventh annual Panhellenic scholarship bridge party to be given at the Women's Building of Washington University, Feb. 2. Nineteen organized groups are sponsoring the bridge. Since 1927, city Panhellenic has loaned more than $1200 to junior and senior college students who could not have otherwise completed their courses. A portion of this fund is set aside each year for a permanent investment, the interest from which will enable Panhellenic to make direct gifts to deserving students as well as provide loans. Although, heretofore, only students of Washington University have been aided, needy students of any college may apply for the loans.

A committee of three passes on the applicants, with the advice of the Chancellor and the Dean of Women of Washington University. Mrs. Roland Bauer of Sigma Kappa is chairman of this committee, assisted by Mrs. Evelyn Gauger of Alpha Omicron Pi, and Mrs. F. M. Hemker of Zeta Tau Alpha.

The Men's Panhellenic Council of Washington University has had presented to it a recommendation that a fraternity expense pamphlet be printed on the motion, the fraternities believing that both parents and students are entitled to a frank statement of the expense of membership. It is not thought that a comparison of costs would affect the selection of a particular fraternity but that such knowledge would frequently determine the question of affiliation or non-affiliation with any Greek-letter group.

Oil Decision of Supreme Court Lends Interest to Lower Courts' Rulings Against 'New Deal' Laws

Judge Grubb Holding TVA Unconstitutional Denied Government Had Right to Sell Electricity as Chief Object of Project.

By Samuel J. Shelton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE emphasis on "constitutional processes of legislation" in the Supreme Court's decision finding the Government's oil control regulations promulgated under the National Industrial Recovery Act to be unconstitutional lends new interest to other recent decisions in which lower Federal courts have tentatively stamped the label of unconstitutionality on other "New Deal" laws.

One instance is the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) case in which United States District Judge W. I. Grubb at Birmingham, Ala., broadly described the Government's electric power producing and distributing program as exceeding its constitutional authority.

Another pertinent case is that in which Judge Merrill E. Otis in the Federal District Court at Kansas City held not only that price-fixing as practiced under the number code was illegal but also that Congress was without power to fix retail prices even in interstate commerce. His decision, which bears close relation to many NRA code regulations, was reported at length in the Dec. 29 issue of the Post-Dispatch.

NIRA Held Invalid.

In still another case, also involving the number code, Judge Grubb held that the National Industrial Recovery Act was unconstitutional. He dismissed an indictment against W. E. Belcher, a small operator, who was charged with working his employees longer hours and paying them lower wages than were prescribed in the number code. The Government has appealed this case to the Supreme Court.

With incisive phrasing, the Supreme Court, in its oil decision, asserted the supremacy of constitutional authority, once when it said, "The point is not one of motives but of constitutional authority, for which the best of motives is not a substitute," and again, "The question is not of the intrinsic importance of the particular statute before us, but of the constitutional processes of legislation which are an essential part of our form of government."

The question of the Government's authority, under the Constitution, to engage in the business of producing and selling electricity is at the bottom of Judge Grubb's TVA decision. The Court overruled the TVA's motion for dismissal of a suit in which preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power Co. asserted the acts of the TVA were unconstitutional.

The Federal Government's powers are only those specifically stated by the Constitution or those reasonably incidental to the exercise of granted power, the opinion pointed out, but nowhere in the Constitution was the Government authorized to engage in the electric power business as a primary function. It might generate electricity in connection with its lawful enterprises and might sell any surplus to avoid waste; but as Judge Grubb viewed it, the power business had been a major function of the TVA and was not secondary to such constitutional function as control of navigation, the national defense and development of Government owned lands.

TVA "Selling Power."

The complaining stockholders were seeking to set aside contracts entered into between the Alabama Power Co. and the TVA, on the ground that the business was beyond the authority of the TVA. Giving the TVA time in which to file an answer, the Court said:

"The Tennessee Valley Authority, if the averments of the bill are sustained, is engaged in producing and selling electric power in Alabama, in an enterprise having no substantial relation to the improvement of navigation or any constitutional power, on an elaborate scale, building dams designed for maximum electric power production to increase surplus power; fixing rates and terms in

Where the Profit System Reaches Its Highest Form of Expression

Bata, the Czecho-Slovakian Shoe King, Makes Money on Virtually Everything His Thousands of Employees Buy—Supplies Necessaries of Life at Cheap Prices; in Return Gets Their Labor at Low Wages.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.

THE firm that grew out of Thomas Bata's shoe repair shop in his native Czecho-Slovakia has expanded until today Bata shoes are worn by virtually every kind and condition of people in the entire world. Even peoples who have gone barefoot for centuries in odd corners of the earth are succumbing to Bata methods and buying shoes, if only for brief display.

The women of Haiti who walk barefoot over stony mountain roads with great burdens on their heads slip on a pair of Bata shoes at the edge of the market place so that for an hour or two each week they may be the equal of townswomen. Veiled women in Tunis mince along in Bata's 7-As. On Halstead street in Chicago there is the bright allure of Bata chain store windows.

Sun Never Sets on This Modern Commercial Empire.

Bata ships and Bata airplanes travel all the thoroughfares of trade. And one may literally apply the ancient boast of the British Empire to this modern commercial empire; the sun never sets on the Bata factories. Somewhere during every second of every hour the Bata machines are whirling.

The remarkable success of this extraordinary company is due in part to the way in which Thomas Bata adapted American methods of mass production to a unique system of dealing with labor, according to reports to the Department of Commerce here. American commercial attaches in Europe have made several studies of the chief Bata plants, indicating that Bata learned his American lesson very well indeed. So well that one Commerce Department report is prefaced with the remark: "We believe that the methods by which this great success has been obtained will be of practical interest to every tanner and shoe manufacturer in this country."

Thomas Bata was killed in an airplane crash two years ago, but he left careful plans for the expansion of the firm he founded. These are now being carried out by his brother, John, and two or three trusted employees. Latest reports show how the firm has extended its operations to cover the entire Orient, with the exception of Japan.

Construction has begun on a plant to employ more than 1000 workers in Batanagar—Bata Town—which is being established about 14 miles from Calcutta, India. In this industrial center, as in other Bata towns throughout the world, the firm will own all services, from housing to electricity. These are furnished to workers at cost, or with only a narrow profit margin, which is in part compensation for wage scales that are lower than those that prevail in most industrialized countries.

Company Eyeing Markets in Philippines and Haiti.

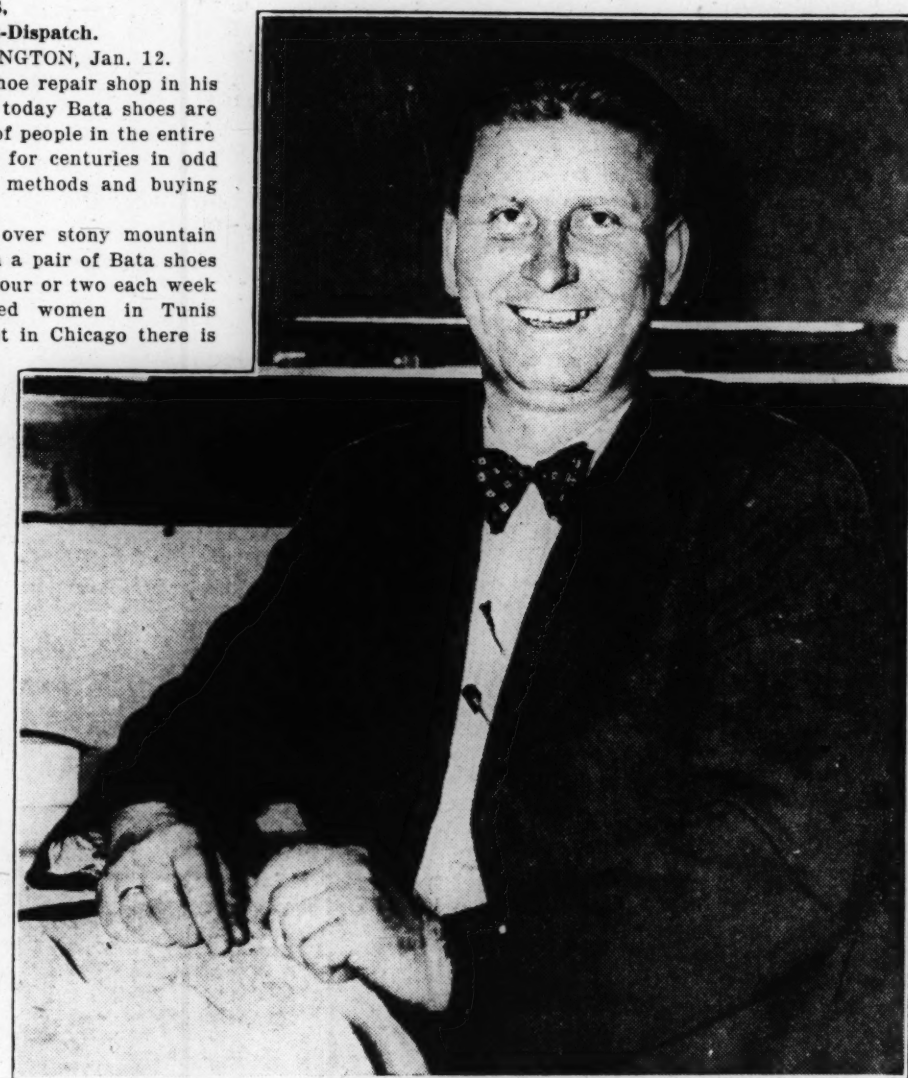

Bata's retail stores have been so successful in China that the firm is opening many more. Plans are being completed to build a shoe factory near Shanghai to manufacture special sizes and types demanded by Chinese consumers.

Although Bata sales have been steadily increasing in the Dutch East Indies, a representative of the firm is now selecting a factory site and making other arrangements to begin manufacture, near Batavia, in Java. Similarly, a Bata agent is investigating the possibilities of manufacture in the Philippine Islands, where American shoes have dominated the market. Sales of the Bata retail stores in Siam have mounted rapidly in recent months.

Nearer home, in Haiti, the Bata retail shoe stores and persistent rumors that a factory would be established, have alarmed native craftsmen, who until the last two years have made by hand virtually all shoes worn on the island. Reports to the Department of Commerce indicate that manufacture will probably not be established in Haiti, as tariff barriers are not high enough to make this step necessary.

For some time the Bata company has owned a factory and town site in Maryland, near the main highway between Baltimore and Philadelphia, and there have been reports that the company would construct a large plant. Bata now has a chain of retail stores in Chicago and contracts for large consignments with many big department stores in various parts of the country.

Starting with his father's small shoe shop in Zlin, Thomas Bata developed the idea of specializing in the manufacture of shoes. With the first machines that he was able to buy he began to make a cheap type of shoe for women. Seizing upon new styles and tricky new color combinations, Bata pushed a well-known type of shoe which is for the most part glued rather than sewed. In 1904 he and several of his workmen came to the United States and each worked in a different shoe factory in the neighborhood of Lynn, Massachusetts. On their way home they stopped to work in English and German factories. They returned to Zlin with a wealth of information which Bata was not long in applying to his own business.

Survives Crisis by Cutting His Prices 50 Per Cent.

The business expanded rapidly and was given new impetus by the war. In 1917 production in the Bata plants reached 10,000 pairs a day. Bata survived the post-war crisis by slashing his prices 50 per cent, a feat which his competitors could not begin to equal. This was possible partly because Bata had made his business entirely self-contained. He had his own forests and sawmills, he made his own bricks, rubber, lasts, dies, shoe boxes, polishes, tanned his own leather, and so on down to the last item needed for manufacture.

Also, he had early begun to free himself from subservience to American manufacturers of shoe machinery. As is well known, this machinery is never sold, but is leased on a royalty basis, so that the company manufacturing the machine derives a steady flow of profit so long as the machine endures. Bata would not be satisfied with such an arrangement. He had his own engineers devise, with the aid of American and European models, his own machines, combining second-hand parts with new parts. Today the Bata firm pays a relatively small sum in royalties for the use of American shoe machines.

But an even more important factor in enabling the Bata company to cut radically under competitor's prices on the world market was the way in which provision had been made for the physical welfare of the laboring force; so that a cut could be made in the real money wages of the workers without impairing their efficiency or without jeopardizing the considerable labor reserves essential to so large an industry.

Bata's fellow countryman, Karel Capek, might have been describing the Bata plants when he wrote his satirical play, "R. U. R.," about workers who have become robots; their physical well-being perfectly attended to, but nevertheless robots whose one function is to tend the production line. The robots in "R. U. R." rebelled. But the Bata workers, judg-

By JOUETT SHOUSE,
President American Liberty League and Former Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

FOR several thousand years some hundreds of churches have been advocating respect for the observance of the Ten Commandments. So far, complete success has not been attained.

For more than 150 years the American people generally have assumed that the Federal Constitution was so firmly established that it needed no continuing advocacy for its protection. Events of the past few years have indicated that this was false optimism.

That explains why the American Liberty League came into existence and why its founders intend that it shall remain in existence for as long as may be necessary.

A constitution has been described as a restraint upon the powers of government. That is certainly true as applied to a government in existence at the time the constitution is adopted.

"Charter of Government."

But the American Constitution is more than that. It is the actual charter of the Federal Government; it called that government into existence; it specified what the Government may do and what it may not do. It is the edict of the people of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States amounts to a contract between the people and the officers of government; executive, legislative, and judicial. That contract delegates to officials the power to do certain things and it forbids them to do certain other things.

Contracts may be modified or canceled, but only by mutual consent or by methods specified in the contracts. The Federal Constitution contains adequate provisions for its own modification through the orderly processes of amendment.

How Changes May Be Made.

If the American people wish to change the form of their government from a Federal republic with limited powers to an absolute dictatorship or to state socialism, they can do so by appropriate amendments to the Constitution.

However, so far, they have done nothing of the kind, and the existing contract is still binding, whether it is observed or not.

One basic purpose of the American Liberty League is to see to it that this contract is complied with—faithfully, honestly, completely, and without evasion under the camouflage of giving new names to unconstitutional proposals.

By the very nature of its bipartisan parentage and membership the League is not a partisan organization. Neither is it an organization devoted to the interests of any particular segment of the population, geographic, social, racial, or financial.

The League's aims are very definite. They are as public as it has been possible to make them. They are embodied in its articles of incorporation as follows:

"The particular business and objects of the society shall be to defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States and to gather and disseminate information that (1) will teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government and (2) will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

It will be noted that the statement of principles links the "rights of persons and property." There is a very good reason for that conjunction.

In the view of those who comprise the membership of the League the superficially drawn distinction between "human rights" and "property rights" is a catch-phrase and nothing more. The two so-called categories of rights are inseparable in any society short of Utopia or absolute communism.

To protect a man's so-called human rights and strip him of his property rights would be to issue him a fishing license and then prohibit him from baiting his hook.

Stands for Property Rights.

Furthermore, there is one very clear lesson to be learned from history—namely, that governmental disregard for property rights soon leads to disregard for other rights. A bureaucracy or despotism that robs citizens of their property does not like to be haunted by its victims.

The prevention of governmental encroachments upon the rights of citizens was one of the principal reasons for the division of the Federal Government into the legislative, judicial and executive branches. Where one man, or one bureau, is lawmaker, prosecuting attorney, judge, jury and sheriff, there is no protection for the citizen.

There is no justification, under the traditional American system of government, for permitting an executive bureau to issue orders having the force of laws and subjecting citizens to criminal or civil penalties; there is no justification for permitting an executive official to take over the legislative prerogative of levying taxes and specifying the purposes and manner of disbursement of revenues.

Meeting an Emergency.

The need for rigid observance of constitutional restrictions is always greater in emergencies than in more normal times, because the emergencies produce constant pressure for disregard or evasion of limitations.

Such pressure is dangerous enough when exerted upon the Senate or the House, though in Congress the interests of one group or section may be counterbalanced by the conflict with other groups or sections, and the net result is likely to be action in the interest of the entire nation.

A totally different situation arises when Congress evades its constitutional responsibilities and delegates legislative powers to one man or one bureau.

The American Liberty League believes that Congress, having been elected to represent the people, should not shirk its task by delegating authority to bureaus to promulgate arbitrary regulations having the force of laws.

Delegation of Power.

Likewise, the League believes that Congress should not attempt to delegate judicial power to executive bureaus. The court of the nation and not Government bureaus should pass upon questions of civil justice.

It is also the belief of the League that the right to authorize the spending of public funds and to raise revenue is solely the function of the legislative branch of the Government and that balanced budgets and sound fiscal policies are possible only while Congress retains its full responsibility for the nature and manner of spending public money.

In its efforts to promote its beliefs before the American people, the League will deal in facts and not in visions.

Its objective is to persuade the elective officials of the Government to follow the principles in which the League believes.

The methods which the League will utilize while working for this objective will vary with the situations presented. However, they will be effective methods and they will be unemitting.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Veteran Looks Back at the War.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THE writer, a veteran of the war (the war to make the world safe for democracy), in talking to many veterans, finds that it has taken from 12 to 15 years to learn what we were fighting for back in 1917-18. The answer is invariably the same: the du Ponts, the Mellons and the rest of the great financiers.
Gen. Smedley D. Butler's shot was a bullseye: he "never came across any soldiers over there who could tell him why they were fighting." Quite so, for at that time we were under the general impression that we were doing our patriotic duty. We young men were conscripted and ballyhoed into the service to carry on the great business of war for the purpose of making enormous profits for the high lords of finance! They must exact their customary pound of flesh.

These young citizens of the U. S. A. must enter into combat with the young citizens of another nation because some hundred citizens of the United States had been permitted to book passage on a British transport (the Lusitania), a ship loaded with munitions and sunk off the coast of Ireland. Had we had a law at that time prohibiting the booking of passengers on a ship carrying war materials, it is possible the United States would never have taken an active part in the World War.

After all, did not the United States pay rather dearly for restitution and apologies for the loss of those hundred citizens in the Lusitania disaster? Are we not still paying today, and for how long will we continue to pay? And when shall we expect to receive restitution?

If our country must permit its munitions manufacturers to sell their products to warring nations, the Government should limit the delivery of said munitions to our country's border. Why don't we build enough airplanes, battleships, submarines and guns to protect our own country; combine our entire war personnel under the heading of the Marine Corps, and after putting our own houses in order, mind our own business? Is it impossible to take a lesson from the small country of Switzerland, which has been getting along pretty fairly with a minimum amount of war?

A VETERAN.

When Women Have Careers and Men Babies.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
ALTON HOOSIER hit the nail on the head. Women don't want babies—they want careers.

For centuries women have worn skirts, but under the rapid deterioration of men, these women are changing to pants. Well, that's progress for you. Any morning now I expect to see men wearing skirts—after that, I'll look forward to the time when they will be having babies.

Well, here is hoping that within our lives we never see the parade of Nietzsche's herd of blind beasts, for if we should, our soft, pink men of today might be deprived of the thrill of giving birth to our species.

ROBERT F. MILLER.

Employment Makes Business.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
IN "The Way to Balance the Budget," Jan. 2, Walter Lippmann tells us how it would relieve the strain on Uncle Sam's pocketbook if business recovered so that the unemployed could be put back to work. That kind of reasoning shows how far astray even an astute man like Mr. Lippmann can go, once he heads in the wrong direction.

It is not that business makes employment; employment makes business. You just have to have employment—work—or you don't get any business. Employment produces goods, services and wages—purchasing power. That purchasing power, through demand and consumption, turns your goods and services into wealth. Goods and services for which there is no demand, no consumption, soon cease to be wealth and become taxable burdens.

Production and consumption are the two legs on which industry must walk, and industry must provide for both, through employment. That is business.

DEMOCRACY.

Pierron, Ill.

Progress Under the New Deal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
WITHIN the past century, many reforms have been accepted and have proved constructive. It required a century of education and agitation to abolish slavery. For a half-century we have striven to abolish child labor, and within the past two years our minimum wage enforcement has almost abolished the practice. The sweatshop and cutthroat methods of competition are taboo by better business bureaus. We are perfecting a banking system that will prevent the freezing of assets. We are inaugurating a "co-operative buyers' league" that will put a crimp in our profit system.

Anything that succeeds just now is a part of the New Deal. If it does not function, it is a hangover from the Old Deal. In fact, our civilization is very much like our human body, which means that it "has the ability to create antibodies for its own infection."
Dayton, O. F. M. KIRKENDALL.

WHAT WILL THE SUPREME COURT DO?

He would be a rash prophet indeed who would attempt to forecast the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the great gold case.

Consider the issue: On the one hand the contention of the Government that abrogation of the gold clause in public and private contracts was within the sovereign powers of the United States and that reinstatement of the clause, involving the addition of some $69,000,000,000 in present-day money to existing debts, would produce chaos. On the other hand, the contention that Congress has no constitutional right to impair contracts.

On the one hand, the constitutional right of Congress to regulate the currency; on the other hand, the constitutional inhibition against the taking of property without due process of law.

To state the issue is to state the tremendous difficulty of the problem before the court. It has never before been called upon to settle a problem exactly like this one. The legal tender cases raised cognate questions, but they did not contain the present clean-cut issue between the sanctity of contracts and the right of Congress to regulate the currency. In the first of these, in 1868, the court upheld a clause in a contract calling for payment "in gold and silver, lawful money of the United States." In the second, in 1869, the court held, by 5 to 3, that Congress had exceeded its powers in requiring greenbacks to be accepted for private debts not expressly payable in gold. But in the third case, in 1870, the court, with two new members, decided that Congress had the power to make paper money legal tender for all private and public debts, although this power did not apply to contracts to pay "some specifically defined species of money."

The issue in the present case is bound up with grave and far-reaching questions of expediency—questions raised by Attorney-General Cummings when he linked the case with the international financial situation and when he stressed the potential effect of an adverse decision upon great debt structures such as those of the railroads.

Speculation as to what the court will do is inevitable—but futile. No valid basis for prophecy can be found in any previous decisions. Nine men are sitting as umpires in one of the most momentous legal cases in the country's history—that is all we can know for the present.

SEMBRICH.

Perhaps Madame Sembrich lived too long. Her last appearance at the Metropolitan was in 1909, when Theodore Roosevelt left the White House in a blizzard, when Woodrow Wilson was known only as a university president who was trying to democratize Princeton, when Stalin was a private in the Czar's army, when No. 10 Downing Street was as remote from Ramsay MacDonald as the gates of Paradise, when the stars of Hollywood were in pinafores or posterity. But wherever opera had been sung Sembrich had come and seen and conquered, and then by way of the concert stage she visited the hinterland, a glorious singer still, a woman of charm, an artist who delighted to please. Dead at 76, and the world she entranced is as dead as her golden voice.

AMERICAN VOTERS IN THE SAAR.

Several thousand residents and citizens of the United States are among the voters in the Saar plebiscite today. This situation has aroused widespread speculation, voiced as follows by an inquiring reader of the Post-Dispatch: "Have Americans the right to vote in another country? If so, do they lose their citizenship in America?"

In the Saar plebiscite, the right of franchise is not based on citizenship or even residence. The Treaty of Versailles states the basis of eligibility as follows: All persons, without distinction of sex, more than 20 years old at the time of the voting, resident in the territory at the date of the signature of the present treaty (Jan. 10, 1920), will have the right to vote.

American citizens formerly resident in the Saar thus are voters with legal status equal to that of native Saarlanders still living there. In fact, 55,000 of the voters today, or 10 per cent of the total, are coming from outside the Saar, as the result of this provision.

As to possible loss of citizenship: This country's Citizenship Act of 1907 defines an expatriate as one who has been naturalized in any foreign state, or who has taken an oath of allegiance to a foreign state. A naturalized citizen, it is stated, shall be presumed to have expatriated himself by two years' residence in his native land, or five years' residence in any other foreign country, but shall have opportunity to remove the presumption by presenting evidence to an American consular officer abroad. A naturalized American also loses citizenship by desertion from the army or navy in time of war.

None of these conditions will apply to the casting of a vote in the Saar today. No oath of allegiance will be required, so voting there has no more bearing on citizenship than would a vote as a member of the board of a foreign corporation.

There is some reason, however, to criticize the propriety of votes by American citizens in an election over a foreign political issue. If naturalized Americans viewed their oath of allegiance strictly, they would shut all active participation in the affairs of their homeland, even though actual violation of their oath might not be involved. But it is no cause for wonder that thousands were unable to refuse the generosity of Nazi propagandists in offering a free trip to Europe and return in exchange for voting in today's election.

THE CARNAGE OF 1934.

The total number of motor vehicle fatalities in the United States in 1934 was 35,500 persons, says the National Safety Council. This represents an increase of about 13 per cent over the previous year's figure, 29,900.

Almost 100 persons, the figures show, are killed by motor cars daily. This is approximately four deaths an hour, one every 15 minutes. Suppose one day's fatalities were concentrated in a single disaster in one community—it would be headline news from coast to coast. Suppose this continued day after day—the country would recoil in horror; from every side would come demands that the shocking wave of lives be stopped.

Last year's total of 35,500 such fatalities is only about 2000 less than the total number of American soldiers killed in action in the World War (37,568). It continued for 10 years, the number would exceed the total of Americans killed in war throughout the entire history of the country. More fatal than war (for it continues year after year), the highway slaughter yet has become, to the public at large, a complacently tolerated evil until it strikes close. Study of what that appalling figure—35,500—means should help awaken public and lawmakers to the need for preventive measures. Since the states that show the smallest increases in last year's record are those with drivers' license laws, there is in the total a direct warning and a challenge to the Missouri Legislature. And likewise, there is emphasized the need for caution by drivers and for rigid enforcement of traffic laws by the authorities.

THE PRINCE OF PRODUCTION.

The story of Thomas Bata is told elsewhere in this paper. It reads like fiction; like the biography of a cosmic shoemaker fashioned in the imagination of the younger H. G. Wells. Incredible as it is in the multiplicity of detail and terrestrial magnitude, it is a record of things done and doing—a record that compels statistics to soar aloft on romantic pinions.

Thomas Bata started life as the son of a cobbler. The father's shoe repair shop is now a factory employing some 16,000 people. That is the parent plant in the town of Zlin, in Czechoslovakia. Its progeny are widely scattered. They are found in Holland, Belgium, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Palestine and Germany. Ground has been broken for a factory at Calcutta. In the embryo of blueprint is yet another factory near Shanghai. It is a long way from gray, old, stoical China to Baltimore, but East and West are all the same to Thomas Bata, who will be presently making shoes in Dr. Mencken's back yard.

And he sells them everywhere. His stores rub elbows with the Orient's bazaars. They fling their invitation up and down Chicago's Halsted street, only a step from that Archer road that once listened to the soliloquies of Finley Peter Dunne's Mr. Dooley. The barefooted toilers in the primitive, lonely stretches now appear in the market place as proudly shod as their city cousins. Teheran haggles over counters for the same merchandise which is thrusting itself into the department stores of Boston and San Francisco. The trade of every purse is catered to. Fabrikoid brogues for the peasant, the spangled sandals of Palm Beach, the silver slippers of Semiramis—Bata makes them all. His ships sail the Seven Seas in this saga of commerce, and airplanes carry his envoys to glittering capitals and lowly villages, in almost Alexandrian tempo.

All this, impressive though it is in the extent of its conquest, is only a glimpse of a business that has achieved the final flower of perfection; an enterprise, if you please, that has wrought an industrial feudalism.

Go back to the home town of Zlin. The factory and the army of 16,000 workers might be called a baronial estate. These people all live on the overlord's land. In houses he has built, and practically everything they consume is purchased in the "company stores." It is twentieth century villeinage. They are comfortably housed, these retainers. Modern conveniences, many of the gadgets, a scale of appointments that, broadly speaking, pairs with our so-called "model communities." Always the price is modest, but always yielding a profit.

Profit, indeed, is the touchstone of the Bata system. Everything that enters into the making of shoes and into the operation of the factories is company-owned. It is literally a self-contained business. And it is so organized and conducted that a loss, wherever it occurs, is detected and located, and the culprit pays. This baronial institution has made a bow to modern philosophy in the way of a profit-sharing plan which, seemingly, is more gesture than reality. A sop to Cerberus.

Thomas Bata has been dead two years or more, killed in an airplane crash. In a mood of premonition, occasioned by the death of an executive in a similar accident, he drafted campaigns for expansion with extraordinary prescience, which his successors are following. In this Machine Age of which Ford was the avatar and is now the king, it does seem as if the shoemaker of Czechoslovakia out-Henried Henry.

DISMISSED!

Dismissing charges in a traffic case, Police Judge Vest said: "I don't see any sense in fining a man just for losing his temper."

The defendant had parked double, in violation of the law.

He argued with police when ordered to move. Told to drive to the station, he drove to his home. He finally consented to be arrested.

When his case first came up in court, he failed to appear and was fined $100 by Judge Fitzgibbon.

On rehearing, Judge Vest dismissed the case.

In all human probability, the average citizen in the same circumstances would have had to pay a fat fine.

But the defendant in this case happened to be Leslie Pettus, chief civil engineer of St. Louis.

Mr. Average Citizen cannot be blamed if he concludes that there is a special brand of justice among office-holding Democrats.

AN ENGLISH VIEW OF NORMAN THOMAS.

In a review of Norman Thomas' book, "Fascism or Socialism?" a writer in the Manchester Guardian makes the following comment on Norman Thomas:

It (the book) helps to show why the Socialist party has made so little headway. Mr. Thomas writes sincerely, fairly, persuasively; one cannot read him without appreciating his character and abilities. He interests but he does not stir; there is no drive, no passion in his writing, no abundance of personality. He and many of his colleagues like him lack the qualities of the demagogue, and so give place to men who have little more than the demagogue's defects.

It is true Mr. Thomas lacks those demagogic qualities that explain the astonishing success of men like Long and Bilbo. But he also bears what up to the present time in American politics has been the insuperable handicap of wearing the Socialist tag. The United States may go Socialistic, in fact, many of the New Deal policies have been so termed, but it is doubtful whether it ever will do so under that label.

Upton Sinclair ran for Governor of California in 1930 as a Socialist. He received 50,480 votes as against 999,393 for the winning candidate and 333,973 for the second man. In 1934, Sinclair again ran for Governor, this time on the Democratic ticket, and he received 845,944 votes. Incidentally, this was almost as many votes as Norman Thomas received from the country at large in 1932 (834,781) when running for President on the Socialist ticket.

In either of the old parties, a man of Mr. Thomas' gifts would have gone far. By remaining a Socialist, he has committed political suicide as the price of carrying the torch of his ideals.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

A Chinese Ballad

THE LADY OF THE LONG WALL.
Translated from the Chinese by Genevieve Wimsatt and Geoffrey Chene. (Columbia University Press, New York City.)

THERE have been various anthologies of Chinese poetry, consisting largely of brief, impressionistic utterances that seem little more than exclamations of delight or wonder or sorrow, leaving to the wisest silence out of which they break the building of the meaning they suggest. In the original Occidental significance of the word poet—a "maker"—such fragmentary utterances are hardly to be described as poetry, save as the subsequent "making" in the expanding and heightened consciousness of the hearer may be regarded as the completed poem.

But, according to the experts on Chinese literature, there is a very great body of poetry in the structural Western sense of the word, designed to present, not one suggestive instant of revelation, but the moving world of men and things seen in their larger relations. This body of poetic literature is practically untouched by translators, and, judging by the humble popular ballad here for the first time given to the Western world, how great must be this treasure that men still have to share!

"The Lady of the Long Wall" is a folk ballad of an order known as "drum songs," since they are recited to the beating of a drum. Until very recently, these existed only in the memories of the people, as the aristocrats of learning, who presided over the destinies of literature, looked with scorn upon the poetry of the people.

Now that the ancient Chinese culture is breaking down before the Western spirit, with its democratic emphasis, the translator tells us that "folk songs have been welcomed into the hitherto closed ranks of studies on which the Chinese mind, investigative, profound and patient, might with dignity exercise its ingenuity. From Peiping, the Folklore Investigation Society of the School of Sinological Research, through its organ, the Folklore Weekly, now disseminates the data gathered through its efforts."

With the result that many of these ballads have been recorded. May we of the West see more of them as delightfully naive as this one.

"The Lady of the Long Wall" may be 2000 years old, so far as anyone knows. It leads the reader back three centuries before the Christian era, when Chin Shih Huang, creator of the Chinese Empire, was flinging the Great Wall 1500 miles along the northern border of his realm "like a gigantic streak across the cheek of Asia." It is written that this Emperor, a first-class "go-getter," on the make, found little comfort in "the voice of antiquity" from the mouths of the scholarly class. He was going places, and they strove to impede him. So he ordered the burning of all books, other than those on agriculture, medicine and divination; and many men of letters were buried alive.

Probably because the classics survived the decree, Chin Shih Huang never developed any profound love for the learned, and when he was needing laborers for the Great Wall, large numbers of delicate scholars were conscripted for this service, along with men, criminals and others, who, in one way or another, proved troublesome. They died like the proverbial flies, and their bodies were thrown with the rubble into the wall.

Among the conscripts, according to the ballad here noted, was the gentle young scholar and poet, Fan Chi Liang, recently wedded to the very lovely lady, Meng Chiang; and their lives rhymed sweetly even as their names did. After long waiting, the lady Meng set out on foot and alone to see her husband once again, "10,000 li" away. The ballad tells the story of her journey; how she found the bones of him she loved, and went to join him in a better world.

The tale is often amusingly childlike, but it gets at the affections; and there is a freshness of beauty in it that is more than lovely. Credit for the effective phrasing and the excellence of the English verse must, of course, go to Genevieve Wimsatt, who is certainly no tyro in her art. The following examples are fairly typical. The wandering wife speaks:

"Have you forgot our heart-to-heartness, Matching like fish in water?"

"Soon the autumn wind will send Sun-rays slanting to the west—"

"In the shelter of what home, dear, Shall this wayward body rest?"

In this alien Land-of-others, Are there fathers, are there mothers? Far and wide the dried grass grows, All the landscape, 'Neath a sky Darkly frigid, here am I!"

ZAHAROFF: HIGH PRIEST OF WAR. By Guile. Davenport. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

THIS, the first full-length biography of Basil Zaharoff, the "mystery man of Europe," who for half a century was the great munitions king (or rather emperor), should make excellent mental fodder for those who may enjoy morbid musings on the ludicrous asininities of our society. It is especially interesting in view of the current modest "investigation" of war profits in our own country. The disclosures here made are so preposterous that the tragic mood it induces at the outset changes into one of overwhelming farce-comedy before the book ends; and great statements are the puppets of the show.

MOLNERS OF AMERICAN THOUGHT. Edited by William Cordell. (Doubleday Doran & Co., Inc., Garden City, N. Y.)

THE 33 essays, by as many authors, that are here collected have appeared in various magazines during the past two years, and they were chosen both to illustrate the high development of the essay in our day and to present the saner thinking on various problems of vital interest to all intelligent people. There is a wide range of theme, beginning with the fundamental problem of individuality and touching upon practically every field, from economics and international relations to education, psychology and religion. It may seem almost too good to be true, but there is undoubtedly light in every essay, and nowhere in the volume will the reader encounter any of the cuckoo notions that in nearly all fields have passed for original thinking during the past 20 years. The book deserves the strongest recommendation it should prove of very great value to anyone who, although eager to understand, has been unable to find any intelligible pattern in the chaos of our era.

THE NEW EPIGRAM. By Roger W. Brown. (Fleming H. Revell Co., New York City.)

IT is Mr. Babson's "humble opinion" that abnormal unemployment could be very quickly eliminated if the President would turn the job over to experienced industrialists who, by themselves, have created jobs and successful businesses. The solution of the problem seems so simple to Mr. Babson, that I cannot help being puzzled.

And why is this not done? Mr. Babson shrewdly suspects the answer. Because "most successful industrialists who are self-made men happen to be Republicans." Mr. Babson cleverly contrasts "capitalism" with "socialism," and concludes that capitalism, for the latter, the former could easily be made to function in the good old efficient way.

Only one of three things, Mr. Babson is convinced, can save America from Fascism, to wit:

(1) A miraculous return of prosperity before the New Dealers swing us in debt.

(2) A Republican comeback which will check unwise legislation.

(3) A coalition government to restore the confidence of all parties.

Nevertheless, "the only solution for the national problems is through the slow process of race betterment," and this is a matter of "biology and religion, rather than of economics or politics." We've just got to breed better children. "Breeding and environment"—that's the stuff. It stands to reason that the feeding of children and the creation of the proper environment are secondary matters.

But how can the present trend of attack be stopped? "There are several ways it may be stopped," Mr. Babson concludes. "I will risk my reputation by forecasting that I think it will be stopped. It will be stopped by a coalition government."

Mr. Babson could not possibly be the king of nonsense in the nature of a disguised Fascism.

Approps of nothing at all, a poem develops in the mind of one reader. It is that of a rising wave of reaction with growing froth of books upon its crest.

GEORGIAN SCENE: A Literary Pastoral. By Frank Swinerton. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York City.)

IN discussing British authors of the past quarter of a century, most of whom have met and many of whom he has known intimately, Frank Swinerton has produced one of the sanest and most penetrating works of literary criticism of our troubled time. The book glows throughout with steady light.

It is the excessively rare distinction of the author to be able to stand outside of time, to escape the tyranny of the prevailing social mood and to judge values of abiding human standards. At the same time, he is not so detached as to lack sympathy. Incidentally, the book is highly amusing, in the best sense of the word.

CITY IGNORES PLAN BOARD IN SETTING OUT PLAZA TREES

President Brown of Public Service Body Says Planting Is in Accordance With His Own Ideas.

ELMS, SWEET GUMS ARE BEING USED

Won't Interfere With Eventual Embellishment of Memorial Tract, Official Asserts.

Planting of trees on Memorial Plaza has been ordered by the city without regard to a planting scheme prepared by the City Plan Commission or a plan of the Plaza Commission for general development. President Brown of the Board of Public Service, who asserted the trees would not interfere with eventual embellishment of this civic center, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the trees were being planted in accordance with his own plan.

City Forester Baumann started planting 70 elm trees and 72 sweet gum trees Dec. 31, placing them around the edges of six of the seven blocks in the plaza. The trees are eight or nine years old. None will be placed in the block bounded by Thirteenth, Pine, Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, where the proposed war memorial building will be built.

Brown said he had not taken up the planting with either the City Plan Commission or the Plaza Commission and did not know whether the trees would fit in with their ideas. He thought there would be no major embellishment of the plaza for perhaps two years, but in the meantime he felt the grounds should be made attractive in a simple way. Further development of the park should be deferred until the memorial was built, he added. The bond issue voted last May included $1,000,000 for the memorial and for ornamentation of the plaza. A proposed site of the first of these bonds, set Thursday, will include $75,000 of this item, for preliminary work. Last year the city installed a sprinkling and irrigation system under the same six blocks of the plaza where the trees were ordered. This consisted of an extensive system of underground pipes. An appropriation of $50,000 from 1933 park bond funds was voted for this system, the trees and other work.

Brown Ex-Officio Member. The Plaza Commission comprises a group of architectural and engineering firms, with Brown and the engineer of the City Plan Commission as ex-officio members. It was given a contract to plan Civil Court Building, Municipal Auditorium and the Memorial Building, for the customary fees, and to plan the development of the grounds for $1. Members understood the city would have to pay the commission the regular fee if other designers were engaged for the memorial, but there was nothing to compel the city to accept the commission's ground scheme. The general layout for the grounds proposed several years ago by the commission included a cascade, a fountain and a series of pools.

One familiar with the Plaza Commission's activities, told the Post-Dispatch that the planting of trees did not conform to the commission's scheme. The planting decision of the City Plan Commission was furnished to the Plaza Commission and the city Park Division, when the City Forester is a member.

William B. Itner, president of the Plaza Commission, said he did not know what the effect of the trees would be on its design. "We thought we were going to plan the plaza," he added, "but we don't know now whether we will. Our plan has not been completed, only general studies having been made. We expect to design the memorial building when the city is ready."

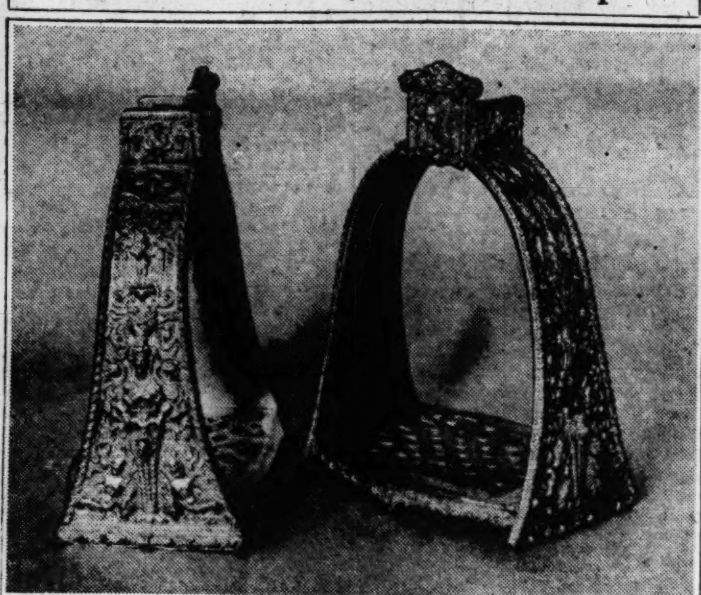

Brown denied a report that the city was considering installation of an electric fountain on Union Station Plaza. He thought preliminary planting of trees and shrubs would be there. Last year's bond issue included $100,000 for this item, he said. The city will offer $25,000 of these bonds for sale Thursday for the work.

The Municipal Art Commission has approved in principle a scheme of the City Plan Commission for development of this plaza, consisting of a comprehensive landscaping program, with a fountain in the center. Several years ago Mrs. Louis P. Aloe, widow of the former president of the Board of Aldermen, for whom the plaza was named, offered to make a contribution towards an expensive fountain.

Designed by Carl Viljes, Swedish landscape architect, the fountain was proposed. Brown has not announced what scheme ultimately will be followed in developing this plaza.

Excessively rare distinction of it to be able to stand outside his cape the tyranny of the prevalent mood and to judge values by man standards. At the same time so detached as to lack sympathy, the book is highly in the best sense of the word.

ently of any constitutionally granted power, and unrelated to it. A corporation created by Congress would have no greater authority to do this than would the Government itself.

Then the Court analyzed the actual purposes of the TVA, as disclosed by its acts, continuing: "A plan for the development of the Tennessee River Valley, as a social experiment, is in no sense related to the improvement of navigation of the Tennessee River, or to the national defense, or to the regulation of Government-owned lands, and the production and sale of electrical power in aid of such development is an experiment which would not be incidental or related to the exercise of any of the constitutional powers named."

Scope Forbids Idea. The scope of the project of the Tennessee Valley Authority, as outlined by its directors, and as it is being administered by it, forbids the idea that its purpose in dealing with electric power is for the salvaging of a surplus to prevent its waste.

"On the contrary, its disclosed purpose is to furnish an example of Government operation of electric power production in the interest of public operation and ownership of such utilities, and also to furnish physical aid to a social experiment being conducted by the Authority in the Tennessee River Valley for the improvement of the race. The official declaration of the directors can be read only with this result."

"For the accomplishment of these aims, a sum approaching a billion dollars has been made potentially available; two additional dams are being constructed; a type calculated to produce a maximum of electrical energy, rather than that best adapted for the improvement of navigation; the construction of a third dam is announced; one hundred and thirty dollars has been allocated to an endeavor by research to discover additional uses of coal to take the place of those displaced by use of water power in the production of electricity."

Action "Ultra Vires." Quoting the act of Congress creating the TVA and authorizing it to sell the surplus power not used in its operations and for operation of locks and other works, constitutional authorization—Judge Grubb added:

"Even if the act of Congress itself does not infringe the Constitution, if the management of the Authority is mistakenly constraining administration of the act by engaging in a project other than the improvement of navigation, and for the production and distribution of electrical power as an independent utility would do, and on a larger scale."

Where the Profit System Reaches Its Highest Form

a definite period set by individual contracts or if the employee leaves the firm, six months thereafter; providing the employee does not go to work in another shoe factory. In such cases, the workmen sacrifice their money.

Group Responsibility Eliminates the Inefficient. This system of group responsibility comes into play if shoes do not come up to sample. If such an inspector rejects a shoe for some defect, it is traced to the proper department and the loss is charged to that department. It is plain the kind of group discipline such a system would bring out, eliminating inefficient workers not through an order of the management, but through action of the group itself.

In the same way this system applies, for example, to purchasing departments which are permitted to purchase only a definite quantity of stock, whether it be leather, shoe laces or linings. Any stock which is bought and remains on hand longer than a stipulated period costs the departmental purchasing head interest from that date on. The system extends to the retail stores in various parts of the world, shoes ordered from the factory are given a certain time within which they are expected to be sold; and if unsold impose interest charges on the particular store. Special consideration is given in the event of serious economic disturbances or conditions which are unavoidable.

In the export field, where the firm grants an agency, the agent is required to take a definite quantity of shoes or otherwise sacrifice the agency.

Standardization to Greater Degree Than in America. Standardization in the factories is carried to a greater degree than in America even, according to observers. "The moving belt or conveyor system is in use in all departments. The shoes move slowly on these conveyors, and as they pass, the workmen see that they quickly and correctly complete the operation for which they are accountable, returning the shoe to the conveyor. Only one kind of a shoe of certain last is turned out in each department. The workmen have thereby become very efficient and are reported to be able to turn out 10 to 11 pairs of shoes per day per man."

A visit to Zlin," says the Government report, "is certainly a revelation. The buildings are large, concrete structures with American fenestration sash windows. The streets are clean, the workmen's houses are bright and tidy, the factories are light and neat, and the general atmosphere is cheerful and stimulating."

Making Unshod Nations "Shoe-Consumers." One of the most successful of the Bata policies has been that of introducing cheap shoes where shoes, or at any rate manufactured shoes, have never before been worn. This has worked not only in Czechoslovakia and throughout Central Europe, but in Arabia, Africa, Haiti and the Canary Islands. Bata factories are now operating in Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, England, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Palestine and Germany. It has been the Bata policy in still other countries to purchase an old established firm, retaining the firm name and a set of dummy directors.

The fleet of Bata airplanes is engaged in carrying Bata salesmen all over the world. A fleet of Bata steamships carries finished goods to the ports of the seven seas and brings back raw materials.

Just before his own death in an airplane crash, one of Bata's chief sales directors was killed in a company plane and this is said to have

CARE OF INSANE IS SCANDALOUS, COMMITTEE SAYS

St. Louis Medical Society Group Recommends Treatment of Some Patients in Homes.

A committee of the St. Louis Medical Society, headed by Dr. Leonard B. Alford, has made a report describing institutional care of mental patients as "little short of scandalous" and advocating a system of caring for some patients in private homes under supervision of "out-patients" in their own homes.

"Experience in many states," the report said, "has demonstrated that under the present institutional system costs cannot be reduced further, having reached an ebb where crowding of patients, their diet, and general care is little short of scandalous. The situation demands some solution and the only one this committee has been able to discover is that of placing in the home the complementary out-patient system."

Discussing the report, Dr. Alford said mental patients might be placed in foster homes under supervision of state hospitals, either privately supported or at the expense of the state, at a considerable saving, and with an improvement in the quality of psychiatric treatment. He estimated that about one-third of the mental patients in St. Louis institutions would be eligible for care in private homes at a saving of about 35 per cent.

Congestion in St. Louis institutions, he said, made further admissions difficult, while with limited staffs and appropriations institutions were unable to offer follow-up supervision for discharged patients. To meet the needs of St. Louis, the committee favored a family care plan which would make use of a village or suburban community, offering the most favorable conditions, where residents would be most likely to need extra income.

"Marked increases in the number of mental cases from year to year make it increasingly difficult and expensive to afford adequate provision," Dr. Alford said. "The family care and out-patient methods were advocated because they tend to effect a saving by avoiding the evils of institutions and at the same time more economical."

The committee includes Dr. Francis M. Barnes, Dr. J. W. Beckmann, Dr. William Nelson and Dr. C. W. Thierry.

NORRIS' IDEAS ON TAKING POLITICS OUT OF POSTOFFICE

Senator Considers Offering Bill But Still Has Hope Roosevelt Will Act.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Senator Norris said today he is considering doing something about "politics" in the Post-Office Department.

The Nebraska Republican, who has been a leader in protests against James A. Farley's double role as Postmaster-General and Democratic National Chairman, expressing hope that President Roosevelt would still submit a measure along that line.

Here are a few of the items Norris plans to incorporate if he drafts a bill: The Postmaster-General would be appointed for 10 years by the President with the consent of the Senate.

Postmasters or others in the department could be removed only by the Postmaster-General for cause after a public hearing.

There would be specific provision against political influence, similar to that in the Tennessee Valley Authority law.

ST. LOUIS' 1934 SHOE OUTPUT UP FROM 1933, OFFICERS SAY

Firm Heads Give Estimate of 9 Per Cent Increase; Figures Not Yet Available.

St. Louis shoe company officers estimate that local factories last year exceeded the 1933 output by about 9 per cent. Actual production figures will not be available until next month, but it was estimated that approximately 75,000,000 pairs of shoes were made here in 1934.

Shoe manufacturers enjoyed a good market in the first months of 1934 and the unsettled period during the middle of the year was followed by a returning tide of orders, which kept factories busy through the closing months. The nation's shoe output of 350,000,000 pairs exceeded the 1933 volume. Leaders anticipate further improvement during the first half of 1935.

Red Cross Executives to Wed.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—A Red Cross romance today resulted in the announcement of the engagement of Miss L. Feiser, vice-chairman, and James Mary Elizabeth Bailey, executive secretary of the 29 years old (Ind.) Chapter. Feiser is nationally known through his 20 years of service in Red Cross relief. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Given Bata pause as to what would happen should he himself die. With a kind of premonition—or so it is reported—he sat down at his desk and for two weeks made detailed plans for world expansion, in accord with world trends that he is said to have foreseen with remarkable prescience. His plans are now being carried out with the conquest of the market and the development of new ones.

PASTORS LOOKING INTO HANDLING OF ST. LOUIS RELIEF

Committee of Ministerial Alliance to Examine Policies on Which Community Fund Operates.

A group of questions about the conduct of relief activities in St. Louis was taken up Friday by a committee of the Ministerial Alliance. The committee will seek answers and will inquire into the general principles of United Relief.

As outlined by the committee chairman, the Rev. R. L. Duckworth, pastor of Immanuel Methodist Church, the questions were substantially as follows: Is there political pressure in purchase of relief materials? Is coercion applied in raising funds?

Is social case work antagonistic or indifferent to the religious motive in relief? On what basis are character-building agencies excluded from the relief drive and is this exclusion desirable?

Should the privilege of designation be extended unless this operates towards increasing funds of agencies designated? Should the privilege of designation be extended unless this operates towards increasing funds of agencies designated?

Answers to these questions, given by E. G. Steger, director of United Relief, were related by the Rev. Mr. Duckworth. He said Steger told him that the difference between staffs and volunteers had been avoided; that compulsion was used to obtain money from people of means who did not offer enough; that 99 per cent of the case work had a religious motivation in their minds; that character-building agencies were better served in separate campaigns (as proved in several instances).

An automobile agency gave United Relief $1000 for a child-care agency, not a member of United Relief, the chairman said. The agency did not get the money. Steger was quoted by the chairman as explaining this money was accepted by mistake; that United Relief had no right to turn funds over to non-members, and that no more gifts would be accepted for non-members.

Want Clear Policy Stated. It was agreed among ministers in the committee that the United Relief accepted contributions designated for specific member agencies but put such funds into the general pool for pro rata distribution. The committee felt that a clear policy on this subject should be declared by United Relief.

The Rev. Ralph Abele, pastor of Holy Ghost Evangelical Church, compared Mayor Dickmann's Christmas dinner for the poor with the ancient Roman custom of "giving beggars circuses and bread."

"For the Mayor," he continued "to be allowed to think he is doing a great humanitarian work by feeding poor devils once a year ought to be discouraged. I think we ought to be frank about this. There was pressure to make persons work at the dinner. There has been pressure on the police and other public employees to contribute to relief funds. I suspect factory workers have been imposed on to contribute."

Pressure on Employees. "Everybody knows," said Chairman Duckworth, "that school teachers have to contribute 1 per cent of their salaries." Asked whether it was a general practice for employers to put pressure on employees to contribute to charity, the chairman added: "I am told the three big department stores do it. The telephone company, the Missouri Pacific, Frisco and Wabash railroads and the department stores all are definitely tied up to United Relief and feel the urge to show results."

The Ministerial Alliance committee decided the fundamental problem for consideration was whether the Catholic Charities and Jewish Federation should be associated with the relief agencies of the community Fund in United Relief. Some members of the committee questioned whether Protestant relief agencies received a proportionate share of the funds raised by United Relief. The committee was appointed when several ministers raised questions about relief matters at the alliance meeting in October.

Small Group in Control. Chairman Duckworth asserted that a group of persons, small enough to be counted on 10 fingers, "controlled the relief situation absolutely." A subcommittee to continue the inquiry was chosen, consisting of Chairman Duckworth, the Rev. Mr. Abele, the Rev. Alpha H. Kent, of Union Methodist Church, the Rev. U. S. Randall of West Park Baptist Church, the Rev. Harry O. Ritter of Harlem Place Methodist Church and Dean Sidney E. Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral.

HARVARD PRESIDENT SAYS NAZIS ATTACK FAITH OF SCHOLARS

He Denounces Germany, Comparing Its Course to Phase of English Puritanism.

AMHERST, Mass., Jan. 12.—President James B. Conant of Harvard University today condemned the hostile criticism of colleges and universities as focal points for "free inquiry" and denounced Germany as a country where the scholar's faith in the human mind was being attacked "with every conceivable weapon."

Dr. Conant's address, at a special convocation at Amherst College at that institution conferred on him a degree of Doctor of Laws, recalled Harvard's refusal last year of a scholarship offered by Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl, aide to Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

"The ever-recurring suspicion of man's creative intelligence has once again become a powerful force and threatens to sweep all before it," Dr. Conant declared.

"The universities and colleges as focal points for speculation and research are the subject of hostile criticism, and in at least one country have suffered a devastating prosecution. Man's restless spirit of inquiry has always been disconcerting to those who demand a final and unchanging picture of the universe."

He said the scholar's faith in the human mind was a faith alien to the "fanatical social reformer who will attack it with every conceivable weapon, such as has been the case in countless localized combats during the development of the universities, such as the case during one phase of the English Puritan rebellion, such is the case in Germany today."

APPEAL ON DEDUCTION OF U. S. ESTATE TAX

Missouri Supreme Court Asked to Rule on the Connection With State Levy.

Whether it is legal to deduct the Federal estate tax in computing the State inheritance tax is a question involved in an appeal taken to the Missouri Supreme Court by Attorney-General McKittick. The appeal is from a decision rendered last month by former Circuit Judge Green, holding that the tax should be deducted.

The decision was in a test action in taking the estate of William H. V. Rosing, an electrical engineer, who died two years ago. His estate, valued at $191,000, was assessed $11,588 State inheritance tax, without the Federal tax deduction, that tax being $8900. The assessment was made by Frank H. Fisse, Probate Court appraiser.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co., executor of the Rosing estate, contended the estate had been improperly taxed. Its objection was sustained by the Probate Court, which ruling was later affirmed in Circuit Court.

The Attorney-General, through his assistant, Edward H. Miller, in taking the appeal, said the finding was contrary to the law and the evidence. It was the contention of the State that it is entitled to a tax on the whole estate, without regard to the Federal tax. Under an opinion rendered by McKittick's predecessor, appraisers had allowed the deduction. However, when McKittick took office he held that the Federal assessment should not be subtracted in computing the State tax.

In contending for the deduction, counsel for the executor pointed out that the State tax was levied against the bequests of each beneficiary, which are paid after the Federal tax has been settled. In the Rosing estate the amount in dispute was $940, but a final decision in the matter will affect a large number of similar cases pending in Missouri, which involve the payment of several hundred thousand dollars. In St. Louis alone 40 such claims are being handled by the Attorney-General's office.

Miller, who represents the Attorney-General in this city, appeared yesterday to have the court sign a bill of exceptions necessary to perfect an appeal.

FREDERICK D. GARDNER INHERITANCE TAX $8093

Assessment Is Based on a Gross Valuation of $590,729 for Estate.

A State inheritance tax of $8093 was assessed against the estate of Frederick D. Gardner, former Governor of Missouri, by Edwin W. Lee, tax appraiser, as shown by his report filed in Probate Court yesterday.

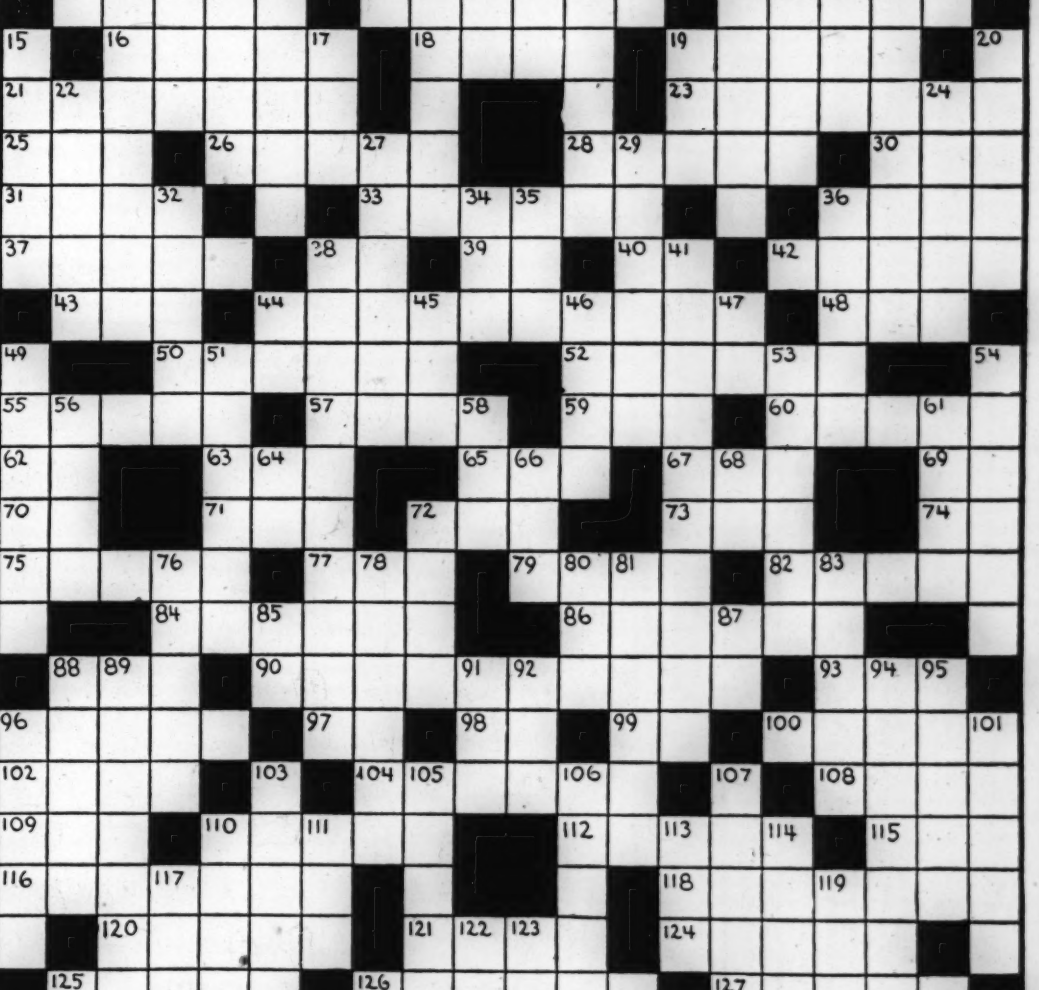

The executors, William K. Gardner, Dozier L. Gardner and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., forwarded a check in payment of the tax to the State Treasurer yesterday.

Gov. Gardner, who was president of the St. Louis Casket Co., died Dec. 18, 1933. His estate was valued in an inventory at $148,822, but the inheritance tax appraiser found the actual gross valuation to be $590,729. This increase was due to the fact that the inventory carried 1300 shares of stock in the casket company at a nominal value of $1 a share, while the appraiser listed the real worth at $300 a share, or a total of $390,000. Other items listed at a nominal value also were placed at their actual value in levying the tax.

The tax was based on a net valuation of $453,000, certain deductions having been allowed. Among the bequests subject to the tax were gifts of $200 each to 35 employees who had been with the casket company for 20 years or more, and gifts of $100 each to 51 employees who had been with the company 10 years or more. The former were assessed $10 each and the latter $5 each on their legacies.

Buick Executive Stresses Value of Newspaper Advertising

Corpe Says It Will Be the Backbone of Company's Selling Program.

Due to the flexibility of newspaper advertising and the speed with which, through the use of newspaper space, the advertiser's message can be published from coast to coast, this type of advertising is exceptionally efficient in developing automobile sales, according to Thomas H. Corpe, advertising manager of the Buick Motor Co.

Discussing Buick advertising for 1935, Corpe said that newspapers would be the backbone of the company's program. "Newspapers are the ideal media because of the speed with which an advertisement can be handled and because of their wide coverage of the automobile market," he said. "There are no 'closing dates' to contend with, and the advertiser's story can be told as spot news. Because advertising is essentially the news of a product, this time element is an important consideration."

"It is particularly important in view of sales developments in the automobile industry. It is evident that the selling peaks, which at one time could be counted upon to occur regularly at certain times each year, are changing and that the advertiser cannot rely upon them as he did formerly in planning his campaigns. Moreover, it frequently is desirable to place advertising emphasis in selected markets or areas. This can be done most effectively through the use of newspaper space."

Skelly Co. Preparing To Put New Gasoline On St. Louis Market

Dealers and Service Men Told of Plans at an All-Day Meeting Here.

The Skelly Oil Co. held an all-day meeting Thursday in the Knights of Columbus Building, 3917 Lindell boulevard, and a luncheon attended by 175 distributors, salesmen and service men from St. Louis and the Missouri and Illinois territory.

The Skelly company is preparing to announce a new gasoline, and this was one of 18 meetings held throughout the territory. The 1935 program was presented to the dealers in the form of a playlet showing the right and wrong way to sell Skelly products. R. M. Ward outlined the sales and advertising plans, Emby Kaye, vice-president in charge of manufacturing for the Skelly Oil Co. at Tulsa, Ok., told the dealers about the company's manufacturing facilities.

W. T. Atkins, vice-president in charge of marketing, Kansas City, Mo., impressed upon the dealers that Skelly was more interested in a dealer making money than in selling a volume of merchandise. W. A. Schierholtz, president of the Fuel Oil Co. of St. Louis, spoke briefly.

PODERJAY ASSERTS HE IS STILL A BACHELOR

Former Yugoslavian Army Captain on Way to New York to Face Bigamy Charge.

By the Associated Press.

BRENNER PASS, Austrian Frontier, Jan. 12.—Ivan Poderjay, former Yugoslavian army captain, said today, while on his way from Vienna to Italy and the United States, that it was ridiculous for American authorities to charge him with bigamy, because he was still a bachelor.

"It is true," he said in this mountain military pass, "that I was married to Suzanne Ferrand. But then the authorities declared our marriage void for technical reasons." Poderjay, who police say has been proved by the records to have had at least three wives, said "So sure am I of acquittal in the United States that I am now making plans to return to Europe and marry Suzanne Ferrand." He declared he would be absolutely also of any culpability in the disappearance and suspected murder of Agnes Tufverson, New York and Detroit woman attorney.

Austrian officials, shortly after his arrival here, handed him over to Italian detectives who will escort him to Genoa, where he is to embark on a steamer for New York.

Jacob von Weisenstein, New York detective, who will accompany Poderjay to the United States, has in his possession copies of marriage certificates showing Poderjay was married not only to the Ferrand woman but also to Miss Tufverson.

"As far as Miss Tufverson is concerned," Poderjay said, "I can only say that we parted good friends when I left New York. She agreed to go her way and I my way. I have no idea as to what became of her but I'm certain she is still living."

New York records show Poderjay was married to Miss Tufverson in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York City, Dec. 4, 1933. He married the Ferrand woman in London the previous March.

Von Weisenstein Calls Poderjay a "Braggart."

By the Associated Press. VIENNA, Jan. 12.—To Ivan Poderjay's assertion that he is still single, Jacob von Weisenstein, the New York detective who will take Poderjay to New York to face bigamy charges, today retorted: "It's the swan song of a braggart."

"Poderjay may dream of the New York courts liberating him," the detective said, "but his dream won't be realized because we've got the goods on him."

Von Weisenstein will leave Vienna tonight for Genoa to take Poderjay into his custody aboard the liner President Folt.

Here and There on the Air

Biblical Drama Series on KSD Begins at 1 O'Clock Today—Story of David and Goliath To Be Re-Enacted With Music.

By J. L. S.

CAST of actors, music selected for atmospheric effect and narration will be used in broadcasting the new "Immortal Drama" series on KSD and the WEA chain at 1 o'clock today and succeeding Sundays. The series will be based on familiar dramatic episodes in the Bible. Today's broadcast will retell the story of David and Goliath.

A statement from NBC headquarters in Chicago reads: "As the drama begins David, his father and brothers, are heard discussing the struggle between the Israelites and the Philistines, and mention of the mysterious giant, Goliath, fills everyone with fear except David. Action then shifts to the Philistine stronghold where Goliath is cheered by his soldiers as he roars his challenges of combat.

"The story reaches its climax when David, having received permission from his father to take food and a word of cheer to the Israelite soldiers, enters the camp and accepts the challenge of Goliath to engage in man-to-man combat, and kills his adversary by cunning.

"Carefully selected music will be used throughout to aid the narrator in bridging transitions from one scene to another, and will also be used to heighten the dramatic effect of the spoken word.

"As a theme for David, excerpts from the second movement of Franck's Symphony in D minor will be played by the orchestra. Bars from Richard Strauss' spilt "Don Juan" will introduce the braggart Goliath and "Pines of Rome," Respighi's fourth dimensional conception of vast marching armies, will help build the mental picture of the Israelite and Philistine hosts massed in the Vale of Elah. Music from Tchaikovsky's "Pathétique" Symphony will prepare the audience for David's encounter with Goliath. Ancient battle chants of the two armies will be sung by an a capella choir."

'Faust' in English

On KSD Tonight

QUEENA MARIO, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Frederick J. Taylor, tenor, also of the "Met," will sing the roles of "Marguerite" and "Faust" in a performance in English of Gounod's "Faust" in KSD's grand opera hour at 7 o'clock tonight.

The opera is based on the legend of the aged philosopher Faust, who regained his youth by selling his soul to the devil. Gray beard and stooped shoulders gone, he rushes forth in search of adventure. Accompanied by Mephistopheles he visits a town fair where Valentin, about to leave for the wars, is bidding farewell to his sister, Marguerite. The soldier is angered when Faust's companion proposes a toast to Marguerite, and rushes at him with drawn sword. Mephistopheles protects himself by magic and Valentin's sword is broken.

While Valentin is with the army his sister is attracted by the handsome stranger Faust, who becomes her lover. Upon the return of the troops Valentin learns of Marguerite's betrayal and attempts to avenge her. He is killed in a duel with Faust and dies, accusing his sister of being the cause of his death.

In the last act Marguerite is in prison awaiting execution for the murder of Faust's child while the latter pleads with her to escape. She turns from him in horror, and as she dies Mephistopheles drags Faust down into a fiery abyss.

Amos and Andy

On WENR at 6 P. M.

NOW that the Amos and Andy programs no longer are broadcast from WLW, listeners will find them on WENR (870) and on KWVK at 10 p. m.

Paderewski Reported

Agreeing to Broadcast

REPORTS in New York are that Paderewski will yield to radio before the end of this year, probably in the fall. Some time ago it was said that he had refused an offer of $25,000 for a single radio concert. Now he appears to have become convinced that his playing will not suffer by broadcasting, but only on condition that he can play what and as he pleases. If Paderewski does broadcast, only Fritz Kreisler and Rachmaninoff of the first rank artists will remain off the air.

Will Rogers and Joe Penner are now spotted at the same time, at 6:30 Sunday evenings, and broadcasters are wondering how the radio audience is dividing between them. Rogers on the CBS net and Penner on the WJZ chain and KWVK.

COMEDIAN TO RETURN TO AIR

JACK PEARL
COMEDIAN whose return to the air is set for Feb. 13.

In Metropolitan Opera on KSD

Followers of the Great Fiction Detective, Including Alexander Woolcott, Christopher Morley and Dr. Gray C. Briggs of St. Louis, Meet Periodically to Discuss His Adventures.

HILE a gaping New York crowd followed and traffic was tied up for two blocks, an old-fashioned hansom cab turned off Broadway into Forty-third street and pulled up. The cabman, in battered high hat, clambered down and opened the flap. There descended Sherlock Holmes, grown somewhat portly with the years, but unmistakable in his fore-and aft cap, his muffler and ulster. He was followed immediately by Dr. Watson, in silk top, monocle, spats and cane complete. The crowd surged around them as Sherlock peered about with a huge magnifying glass for the photographer who had been scheduled to be on the spot to record the arrival of two of the best-known characters of fiction.
But the photographer had apparently missed the appointment. Not even Sherlock Holmes could find him. By that time two policemen had shouldered a way through the crowd and, recognizing that Sherlock Holmes was really Alexander Woolcott and Dr. Watson was Vincent Starrett, both well-known writers, helped them to make their way to a nearby dining room, where they were greeted by the Baker Street Irregulars, assembled for their annual dinner.

The Baker Street Irregulars are named for the street arabs who figure in Sherlock Holmes stories as unobtrusive assistants of the detective. The modern Irregulars are Sherlockians, that is, people who have taken up the study of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's hero seriously—collectors of first editions and of endless minute data.

They have a limited but distinguished membership. One of them is Dr. Gray C. Briggs of St. Louis, who held at the dinner of the discovery—by deduction—of "the house in Baker street" where Holmes and Dr. Watson lived. In 1921, combing London with camera instead of the Sherlockian magnifying glass, he made the find,
and he has the photographs for evidence. They have been published in several volumes of Sherlockiana.

Harold Wright Bell, who attended, disputes the authenticity of Briggs' location of the Baker street quarters.
Dr. Briggs answers, without rancor, that Bell merely has the wrong Baker street; there are four in London. His own, Baker street, he deduces, is the right one, by reason of its location with regard to Marleybone road and
"The Empty House" across the way, which figures in Holmes' escape from the big game hunter with the deadly airgun. It is such nice points as these that the Sherlockians discuss.

When he called on the author—"the mythical Mr. Doyle," as the Irregulars call him—Dr. Briggs related, Doyle asked what he had been doing. "I've been taking pictures of the place Holmes and Dr. Watson occupied in Baker street," Dr. Briggs replied.

"How did you find it?" asked the author with interest.

"By the description."
"Do you know," said Doyle, "I don't think I have ever been in Baker street in my life!"

In his reference to the author as a myth, Dr. Briggs followed a tradition of the Irregulars. They maintain that Sherlock Holmes is still alive—the old Gentleman is 70 this year—that Dr.
Watson and all the host of others who
ing people, but that the late Dr. Doyle, their creator, is a character of fiction.

Anyone mentioning Doyle's name in a gathering of the Irregulars is called to order unless he introduces it in some such phrase as, "That fantastic
the Irregulars explain that they killed him off in revenge—
"Rache," as the word, in German, figures in letters of blood in one of the stories—because he tried to kill off Sherlock Holmes in "The Final Problem." Of course, Doyle had to admit in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" that the detective never really died.

One of Dr. Briggs' stories is how Doyle bequeathed Sherlock to his friend, the late John Kendrick Bangs, and what use the American humorist made of the character.

DR. BRIGGS has a collection of "The Posthumous Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," which Bangs wrote and syndicated, but never published in book form. Also, he has some first editions, and the largest collection of original Sherlock Holmes illustrations in this country, a collection so important that the Library of Congress has asked him to bequeath it to the library in his will.

A fake interview gave thousands the opportunity to see Sherlock Holmes in the person of William Gillette, it was disclosed, when Gillette's turn came in the Irregulars' round of story telling after dinner. Gillette, who wrote the play and created the part on the stage, said it began when a friend sent him a clipping from a New York paper.

"If Sherlock Holmes is ever put on the stage," Dr.
Doyle was quoted as saying, "there is only one actor who is my choice for the role—William Gillette. He looks the part."

Actually, Doyle had said nothing of the sort, but the old-time reporter who connected it must have been a mind-reader. Gillette read the clipping, glanced in the mirror, decided he did look like Sherlock, and cabled the author for permission to go ahead with the play. Doyle consented readily, but stipulated that there be no love in the play. "So," said Gillette, "I put as little love as possible into it." Doyle saw it in London and was delighted with it.

Others around the table of the Baker Street Irregulars included Frederick Dorr Steele, illustrator of Doyle's works; Archie Macdonnell, who traveled all the way from London to bring a Sherlock Holmes story new to the Irregulars; Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, devoted to Holmes no less than to "Hamlet" and "Heartbreak House"; Robert Leavitt, Frank Henry, W. S. Hall, Basil Davenport, Elmer Davis, Earle Walbridge, Allan M. Price and Lawrence P. Dodge.

or more sketches, caricatures and studies have been printed, not to mention several books which take up the private life of Sherlock and his companions at length and in detail. The Sherlockians deduce that Dr. Watson was married three times, and as long as 20 years ago a clerical Sherlockian in England advanced the theory that Watson must have murdered his first wife, and argued his case out very neatly.

THEY are interested in the story of Dr. Doyle's successful application of the methods of his fictitious hero in real life to obtain the release from prison of George Edalji, and later of Oscar Slater, who was serving a life term for murder. They delight in anecdotes of Dr. Joseph Bell, the Edinburgh physician, who had developed the faculty, a part of every alert clin-ician's stock in trade, of sizing up at a glance a patient's age, past health, wealth, work, play, diet, love life, disposition, frame of mind and why—to the point that, when Conan Doyle studied medicine under him, he became the prototype of Sherlock Holmes.

Doyle—who achieved
some distinction in medicine as well as in the detective story and historical novel—began the Sherlock Holmes series with "A Study in Scarlet" in 1887.
He got $100 for the book
then, and never got another penny. By 1894 Sherlock had made him famous the world over, but was beginning to bore him so deperately he contrived the killing—by the hand of another of his creatures, a master criminal—for which the Irregulars retaliate by calling the author a myth. Public outcry forced him to bring the detective back to life and write another series of adventures, but in 1903 he managed to dispose of Holmes with finality.

Sherlock Holmes has been translated into almost every language. Even Japan enjoyed the Holmes play. Sherlockians are almost more than a hobby in keeping alive the quaint and singular characters that Doyle's imagination conjured up. As Vincent Starrett writes in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes":

"If there be one yet living who doubts the reality of these wraiths, let him write the Central Postoffice in London, and ascertain how many hundreds of letters have been received during the last quarter of a century addressed to Mr. Sherlock Holmes at 221-B Baker street—a man that never lived in a house that never existed."

CHIEF of the TERROR—and AGENT of the SECRET POLICE

The Remarkable Career of Duplicity Led by Ievno Aseff in the Days of Czarist Russia, Revealed for the First Time in the Recently Published Story of His Life.

Ievno Aseff.

Madame E. K. Breshkovskaya, "grandmother" of the Russian Revolution.

"He betrayed his comrades for arrest and execution."

By KEITH KERMAN
Of the Post-Dispatch, Sunday Magazine Staff

HAT ruthless political tactic, the Terror, has been revived in Russia. The recent assassination of Sergei Kiroff, secretary of the Communist Central Committee, must, apparently, be added to the long list of Russian murders which were committed primarily as blows against a government—an "impersonal" kind of slaughter planned and carried out under the direction of revolutionary organizations.

In the days of Czarism, the Terror rose sporadically in Russia, and men in high official places kept fearful watch for the bomb, bullet or knife-thrust which would express disapproval of some governmental policy or method, and, incidentally, remove them from the land of the living. From time to time the Social Revolutionary Party, which sought to improve the lot of the common people, employed the Terror as part of its strategy. Among those who planned and executed the acts of terrorism were sensitive intellectuals and idealists, some of whom with difficulty subordinated their abhorrence of murder to their support of a cause.

But the old Terror ended with the fall of Aseff, leader of the terrorists of his time. The exposure of this cynical scoundrel as an agent of the police so weakened the morale of the terrorist organization, by making its members distrustful of one another, that it soon ceased to function. The systematic slaying of high Government officials as an instrument of protest was abandoned several years before the World War and it remained for mass revolt to accomplish what terrorism by a small group had failed to do.

While it flourished, the Terror was the cause of constant warfare between revolutionaries and the Ochrana, or Secret Police. And in this warfare Ievno Aseff for years took a leading part. He played two roles. In one he organized assassinations for the terrorists. In the other he informed the police of what the revolutionaries were doing, balked their plans, betrayed his trusting comrades for arrest and execution. Sometimes he was false to the police and had Government notables, including a grand duke and a cabinet minister, murdered. From both sides he took money. And he kept the double game going for more than a decade before he was exposed.

The story of this almost incredible duplicity is told in detail by Boris Nikolajewsky in "Aseff the Spy," recently published. In matter-of-fact fashion, the author sets forth, against a background of official intrigue and the general revolutionary movement in Russia, the shameful exploits of a cunning, supremely greedy, thoroughly despicable villain.

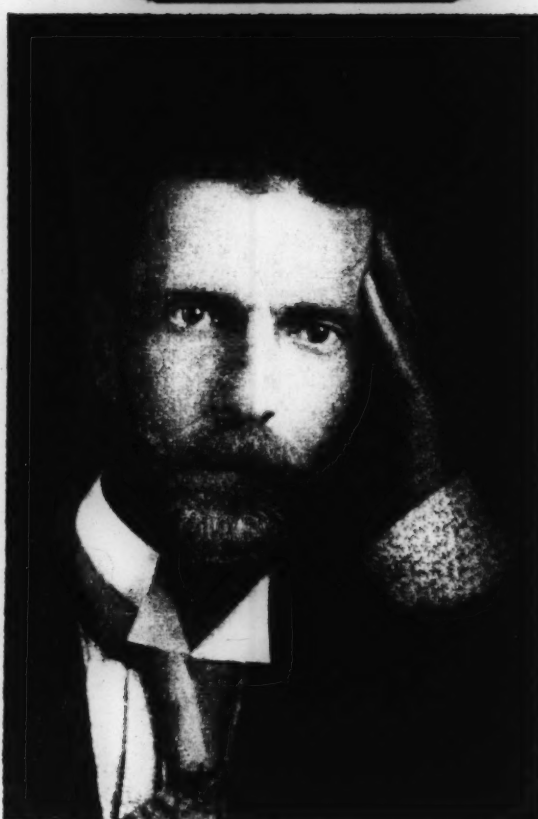

Ievno Aseff was born into a poor Jewish family in a provincial Russian town. His father managed to give him some education, and he worked as a youth at various occupations—tutor, newspaper reporter, clerk and commercial traveler. Some of his associates were young radicals, and in 1892 he was in danger of being arrested for minor revolutionary activity. From this danger he fled to Germany, financing the flight with 800 rubles he had embezzled—proceeds of the sale of a consignment of butter entrusted to him as a salesman. At Karlsruhe he entered a technical school and joined a circle of other Russian students of revolutionary ideas.

When his money ran out, Aseff wrote to the Russian police, offering to send information about the revolutionary movement among Russian students in foreign countries and among the radicals of Rostov, where he had formerly lived. His offer was accepted and so in 1893 he was put on a salary of 50 rubles a month. He continued to make a show of great poverty, even applying for help to charitable institutions; became an extremist, an advocate of the Terror in his talks with other students, attended many revolutionary meetings, married a woman revolutionary, and sent in his reports to the Russian police. Some of these reports were responsible for numerous arrests in Rostov.

In 1899, having completed a course in electrical engineering and gotten his police salary raised to 100 rubles a month, Aseff returned to Russia to become a secret agent of the Moscow Ochrana. The police arranged for him to get a job as an engineer, and revolutionary acquaintances in Germany recommended him to persons of liberal sentiments in Moscow. There he soon enjoyed the confidence of Zubatoff, chief of the Moscow Ochrana, and of the local group of Social Revolutionaries—despite an appearance which was anything but prepossessing: puffy face, low forehead, thick lips, heavy, clumsy figure.

One of the first police coups which he made possible through his Moscow

connections was the seizure of the plant where the Socialist paper, "Revolutionary Russia," was printed. The press had just been moved from Finland to Tomsk, Siberia, and Aseff told the police where it was. Shortly after that, the police arrested A. A. Argunoff, head of the Moscow Union of Social Revolutionaries, and exiled him to Siberia.

BY THAT time Aseff had left Moscow—the police waited until after his departure to make the arrest. Aseff had gone to attend conferences in France, Germany and Switzerland for uniting various groups in the Social Revolutionary Party. The betrayed Argunoff had entrusted the task to him. His police salary had risen to 500 rubles a month.

In this organization work Aseff came into contact with such redoubtable revolutionaries as E. K. Breshkovskaya, "Grandmother of the Revolution" (who died last year); G. A. Gershuni, M. R. Gotz and V. M. Teherunoff. Gershuni particularly admitted Aseff to his confidence, and the spy, informing the police, "In Berlin and in Paris I have penetrated into the very heart of things," gave them detailed reports on this energetic enemy of the Government.

Gershuni at that time was planning the assassination of Minister of the Interior Sipyagin, which was to signalize adoption of the Terror by the new party and formation of its Battle Organization, the active terrorist group. Aseff advised the police to keep an eye on Gershuni but not to arrest him. But the terrorist gave the watchers the slip and brought about the murder of the Minister; a student, disguised as a military officer, shot Sipyagin to death on April 15, 1902, and was hanged for the deed. It was the beginning of the campaign of terrorism by the Battle Organization.

There seems to have been an exaltation in these terrorists as they wielded the weapon of assassination in their fight against absolutism. Gershuni, after the killing of Sipyagin, was described by a comrade as "cheerful and gay and full of his first important success." A meeting of revolutionaries, on receiving word of another assassination, became almost hysterical with elation.

Up to about this time Aseff appears to have been loyal to his employers, the police. He reported fully what information he gathered. But with the beginning of the Terror he began playing his double game, helping now the police, now the revolutionaries, as self-interest dictated. While he had put a watch on Gershuni, he had not given away the assassination plot, and afterward told the police that Gershuni was not concerned in it. A plausible explanation for this course is that Aseff wanted to keep Gershuni free to strengthen his own standing in revolutionary circles; and also feared suspicion would fall on him if a man who had become so closely associated with him were arrested. For the next five years or more he was constantly trying to maintain his position by rendering each side enough service to make it think he served it exclusively.

Aseff joined the Battle Organization, the leader of which was Gershuni. He helped plan political assassinations—most of which failed to come off because he had warned the police. And after Gershuni was arrested, he, Aseff, the police stool pigeon, became chief of the Battle Organization, the active director of the revolutionary Terror.

The arrest of Gershuni, incidentally, was not Aseff's doing. The police had discovered without Aseff's help Gershuni's importance and had instituted an extensive search for him. Aseff later admitted he would have betrayed his comrade if he could have arranged to get 50,000 rubles for it.

The first important task to confront Aseff in his new position of leadership was to arrange for the assassination of V. K. Plehve, Minister of the Interior, who was blamed for an anti-Jewish pogrom in which many people were killed. Aseff planned this act of terrorism carefully—and did not "tip off" the police. Months were spent in preparation for the attempt. While this work was going on, Aseff learned that a small independent group of terrorists, led by a woman, S. Klitchevskaya, was hatching a plot of its own to kill Plehve. He nipped this plot by exposing it to the police, who arrested the woman. In journeying from Paris to St. Petersburg to make the exposure, Aseff took advantage of the company of a high police official to take into Russia a quantity of dynamite for his own assassination scheme. On July 18, 1904, the killing was accomplished. As Plehve rode down the Izmailovsky Prospect on his way to keep an appointment with the Czar, Igor Sazonoff ran to his carriage and threw a 12-pound bomb against it. Carriage and occupant were blown to pieces. Aseff received the news of the triumph in Warsaw.

The assassination of Plehve gave Aseff immense prestige in the party of whose Central Committee he was already a member. The Battle Organization assumed an independent status, with its own treasury. Aseff controlled these funds, and from them he feathered his nest.

The Terror's next blow was at the Court reactionary group, which opposed governmental reform. Several of the leaders were to be slain simultaneously, but plans went awry and only one murder actually was accomplished. That victim was pretty big game, though—the Grand Duke Sergei, uncle of the Czar. He was killed by a bomb at the Kremlin in Moscow, February 17, 1905. Aseff was out of the country at the time.

IN REPORTS to the police during this period, Aseff protected the Battle Organization, concealing the identity of its leaders and setting the police on some old revolutionaries who were opposed to him. He misled his employers by telling of plots to kill the Czar—an enterprise which the terrorists were not planning then. In those days St. Petersburg was the spy's headquarters, but he spent a good deal of time traveling in Russia and other countries, giving police information about revolutionaries abroad as well as at home.

Shortly after the assassination of the Grand Duke the Battle Organization was so weakened by the arrest of a number of its members that it had to be reorganized. The arrests were caused by another agent provocateur, N. Tataroff, who had risen to a position of some prominence in the Social Revolutionary Party. He, in turn, was betrayed to the revolutionaries by a spy in the ranks of the police, and the Terrorists condemned him to death. The sentence was carried out by a Terrorist who stabbed the traitor, after invading his father's house. Tataroff had been paid 16,000 rubles by the police in the eight months of his service to them.

Another police spy executed by the Terrorists was the priest Gapon, who had become a hero to the revolutionaries by leading the crowd to the Czar's palace on "Bloody Sunday," and later had entered the service of the police. Gapon was enticed to a lonely villa, tricked into exposing his treachery, and hanged.

Illness forced Aseff to become inactive for a time, and several more or less independent terrorist organizations became prominent. The most successful was one led by a Lett known as "Karl." After it had committed several assassinations, Aseff returned to "work," and soon set the police on its trail—he had no chance to dip into its funds. "Karl" and about a dozen of his aids were arrested and sentenced to death.

Near the end of his double service as terrorist and police informer, Aseff organized an attempt on the life of the Czar and helped the police balk it. A little later, facing exposure and hoping, presumably, to placate the revolutionaries whom he had betrayed for so long, he organized another attempt to assassinate the Czar and intended, apparently, that it should succeed. It was arranged for two sailors to shoot the Russian ruler when he inspected a new battleship. They failed to carry out their instructions, it seems, because the rescuers would have interfered with a mutiny which was being planned.

THE exposure of Aseff to the revolutionaries as a police spy was brought about by V. L. Burtzeff, editor of an historical review and a sincere revolutionary. In his research into the Russian revolutionary movement, and particularly the work of the political police, he became acquainted with a number of police officials and from them obtained information which led him to believe they had an informant highly placed in the Social Revolutionary Party. Following various clues, he finally decided that this spy was the agent known in police circles as "Raskin"—and that Raskin was really Aseff, head of the Battle Organization. He lacked conclusive proof, however, until he managed to obtain confirmation from A. A. Lopuhin, a former director of the Police Department. Lopuhin had lost his position and hope of a brilliant political career because of the assassination of Minister Plehve and Grand Duke Sergei. Burtzeff convinced him that these assassinations had been arranged by his own agent, "Raskin." Lopuhin then told Aseff's connection with the police.

Burtzeff denounced Aseff to the party leaders, but they were so confident of Aseff's loyalty that they put Burtzeff on trial before a "Court of Honor" for "libeling" Aseff. It was only after he disclosed what the former police head had told him that Burtzeff's story gained much credence. Lopuhin later repeated his statements before representatives of the party. And Aseff, in trying to establish an alibi against a piece of evidence offered hotel bills which were found to be forged. In January, 1909, leading party members sentenced Aseff to death. But he fled to Germany before the sentence could be carried out.

With Madame M., an adventuress with whom he had formed a liaison some time before, Aseff went traveling to distant parts of the world. On returning to Berlin he settled down under the name of Alexander Neufelder, as a respectable stock broker, financed with the savings from his come as spy and terrorist, estimated at not less than 250,000 marks. His association with Madame M. continued the rest of his life. For several years embittered revolutionaries tried to find him, but the hunt slackened after he let it be known, through a newspaper interview, that he was no longer connected with the Russian police. He lost almost all his fortune in the war, and was held in jail by the German police as a revolutionary from July, 1915, until December, 1917. In April, 1918, he died of a kidney ailment. At his burial Madame M. was the only mourner.

THE WORLD'S HIGHEST ALTITUDE FREIGHT LINE

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LIMA, Peru. HIGH above the Andes ranges in Peru, American pilots, in American planes, are carrying heavy cargo over the world's highest altitude freight line. The low point on the route, the terminal at Cuzco, is almost 11,000 feet above the sea. The other terminal, Huanacopampa, is 12,500 feet up. Between these points are jagged peaks, rising more than 14,000 feet into the air, which require a plane clearing the 60-mile route to climb 1,500 feet to clear all obstructions.

Air transportation is the only practical and economical method for carrying freight over the rugged and otherwise inaccessible terrain. Cuzco is the railroad head of the Southern Railway of Peru, while a rich gold mine, discovered by the conquistadores, lies at the upper end of the aerial freight line. The American transport planes bridge the gap and make it possible to put Huanacopampa's gold into the coffers of the world.

Four hundred years ago Francisco Pizarro and his ruthless band crossed the Peruvian Andes in search of treasure and adventure. They found the mine at Huanacopampa and worked it in crude fashion with enslaved Indian diggers. As time rolled by, mountain fever among the workers, the difficulties and dangers incident to transporting the precious nuggets to the coast and the flow of gold from these inaccessible parts of the world, made the operation of the rich deposit on the slopes of the Andes unprofitable.

Then came the recent world-wide demand for gold. This demand proved to be the stimulus necessary to start the Compania Exploradora Cotabambas, creating an economical way by which they might start working the Huanacopampa mine on a business basis.

The way to make the mine a business was to set up a plant to treat the ore at the shaft head. This would require the transportation of heavy machinery for a 1500-horsepower electric plant into the mountains. To build a road over the 60-mile stretch was out of the question. Pan American-Grace officials were called in and they said their planes could carry 55 tons of mining machinery from an airfield 11,000 feet above sea level to a landing place.

The men, with typical American enthusiasm, believed they could do the job. The least they intended was to tackle it. Using a trim, powerful transport, powered by a nine and three-quarter foot engine on the top of the fuselage and a three-quarter foot engine in the tail. It was found that with the big transport could be carried at level flight on two engines at 16,000 feet. Accordingly, the contract was signed and the 55 tons of machinery was carried to the mountain mine without incident, late in the year.

The success of the venture led the Compania Exploradora on to the idea of building a complete milling, amalgamating and cyaniding plant in the valley at the mine head. Machinery required for such an ambitious plant weighed 600 tons. Pan American-Grace said their plane could lug the stuff "upstairs," and another contract was signed.

The job started last Aug. 4 with two trips aggregating 5555 pounds. On Sept. 7, a shade more than a month's time from the initial trip, the plane had completed 129 round trips, carrying a total of 493,805 pounds. The flying time for that portion of the job added up to 145 hours, 35 minutes.

These figures analyzed show that the average load carried approximated two tons, while the average time for a one-way flight was 36 minutes. In tons the machinery carried up to September 7 amounted to 247.

The job has now been finished. With the new machinery the mining company will be able to treat 150 tons of ore every 24 hours. Pan American-Grace will continue its freight operations, carrying the treated metal to the railroad.

A comparison of the airline method and the manner in which freight was handled in the past is interesting. Until the roar of the American airplane engine broke the silence of those great slopes, distances were measured not in miles, but rather in days and weeks. By mule and on foot, and depending on how hard it might rain, the trip from Cuzco to the mine required from 10 days to three weeks. In the old slave days, when man power and life were cheap, men carried piecemeal fabulous wealth in gold out of Huanacopampa. In the distant past they did once carry a piece of machinery weighing 300 pounds up to the mine in 20 days. And yellowed records tell how eight Indian porters died from the too strenuous exertion in the thin air.

The heaviest single piece of machinery carried up to the mine in the transport plane weighed 4395 pounds, more than two tons. Many of the larger parts for the ore-working plant weighed nearly that much. Loading and unloading was by means of a crane. Inside the plane the big pieces were cradled on a small trolley which, after being rolled into proper position with respect to the transport's center of gravity, was secured to prevent shifting of cargo in flight.

In a single-engine ship with K. C. Hawkins at the controls. During the overhaul interval Hawkins transported 12 tons of small parts and tools to Huanacopampa.

The reopening of the mine has given work to the Indians, breaking a depression period which lasted longer than the oldest member of the tribe could remember. The Indians expressed their appreciation for the return to prosperity by holding a tribal ceremony and inducting Pilot Jardine into the tribe.

THE almost stratospheric airport at the mine was constructed by local Indian laborers, who were unaware of the purpose which their work was to serve. They had never seen an airplane until the San Fernando dropped in on them.

The high altitude stretch over which operations are conducted is subject to capricious-meteorological changes and because of this it was necessary to post weather observers at each end of the route. Each observation post is equipped with radio sending and receiving apparatus and observers keep in touch with each other and with the pilot in flight.

THUMBED HER WAY to FLORIDA —THROUGH the AIR

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

THE way of the hitch-hiker has become a crowded one and his lot has been hard since the spread of tales about hitch-hiking highway robbers. It isn't so easy to span a continent by rule of thumb any longer. But these facts have troubled Miss Alice Gibson very little, or not at all.

Hitch-hiking is a slow way of getting freely from place to place, even at best, this young woman thinks. And she expresses her poor opinion of highway travel by becoming (she believes) the first hitch-hiker of the air. Not long ago Miss Gibson wanted to get to Florida. The railroads were too slow, the airlines too expensive. The notion of swinging a thumb down the highway had no appeal at all.

So Miss Gibson stationed herself at an airport and signaled the first outgoing plane for a lift. She got it, and what is more to the point, she got to Florida. Although the pilot who took her in admits that he took up flying "mainly to escape so many folks on the road begging for a ride in my car," he recognized the signal when he saw it on the landing field and he reacted as he was expected to.

Miss Gibson's claim to fame isn't limited to the fact that she believes herself to be the first girl who has thumbed the sky. She is 25, pretty, blonde, Swedish; she is an expert parachute jumper, a medal-winning swimmer and ski racer and ski jumper. And Miss Gibson is also a trained nurse. Her father used to be Swedish Consul at Nome, Alaska, but her birthplace is Oakland, California. When she was still an infant her family returned to Sweden. She had her first ride in an airplane at the age of eight; a friend took her up, and she has been an enthusiast for flying ever since.

This young woman made her first parachute jump when she was 10 years old. Since then she has jumped almost 100 times, from various heights; once she jumped more than a mile. She has never been seriously hurt in this sport, though once she was knocked out as she landed. She wishes it were possible for parachutes to stay up longer. "It's so peaceful and quiet there," she says.

Perhaps it is because she looks so much like an aviator, in goggles, fitted helmet and jodhpurs, that Miss Gibson was so successful in her aerial hitch-hiking.

No one could possibly make the mistake of supposing that she was just a little girl who wanted to go up for the thrill.

Alice Gibson.

Mid-Season Changes for North and South

IT BEGINS to look very much as if the girls themselves will go abroad wrapped in cellophane! The French designers, notably Schiaparelli, are using new materials which are transparent, glossy and firm of texture as overskirts for evening wear; and they tuck a strand of the shining twisted stuff into velours which fashion evening wraps! If this seems freakish to those who can't visualize the sight of a frozen tear in the midst of your dance gown, be assured the effect is much like that of metal cloth. A long, rippling skirt, all shining and soft under its "wrapper" of colorless cellophane!

Heavy nubby crepes are still the most usable and used material for daytime and evening dresses, with pure silk predominating. There is a different kind of "feather-weight" tweed that should loom large in the spring collections as well as for wear under fur coats these bitter days.

Dresses with jackets are not yet outmoded; they seem to be a permanent addition to the types of clothes made by the couturiers these days. But they do nothing to alter the silhouette we have grown used to this season—still very 1930. Light belts on dark jackets, especially tan on dark brown, are to be watched. We even saw one narrow tan calf belt on an evening gown!

Hats show more change than dresses, for there are brims, brims, brims everywhere you look, usually of the undulating variety. Many of them tie coily under the chin.

What else! Lots of flowers at the necks of evening gowns—and oh, yes, jackets and belts of cellophane and white patent leather belts for daytime.

Pink and tan combine beautifully in this shaded velvet gown with velvet flowers and cape to match, worn to reveal sun-tanned arms and shoulders. Note the diagonal sweep of the bodice under the right arm, and the huge cluster of flowers placed near the chin. The back forms a modified cowl and the cape is brief.

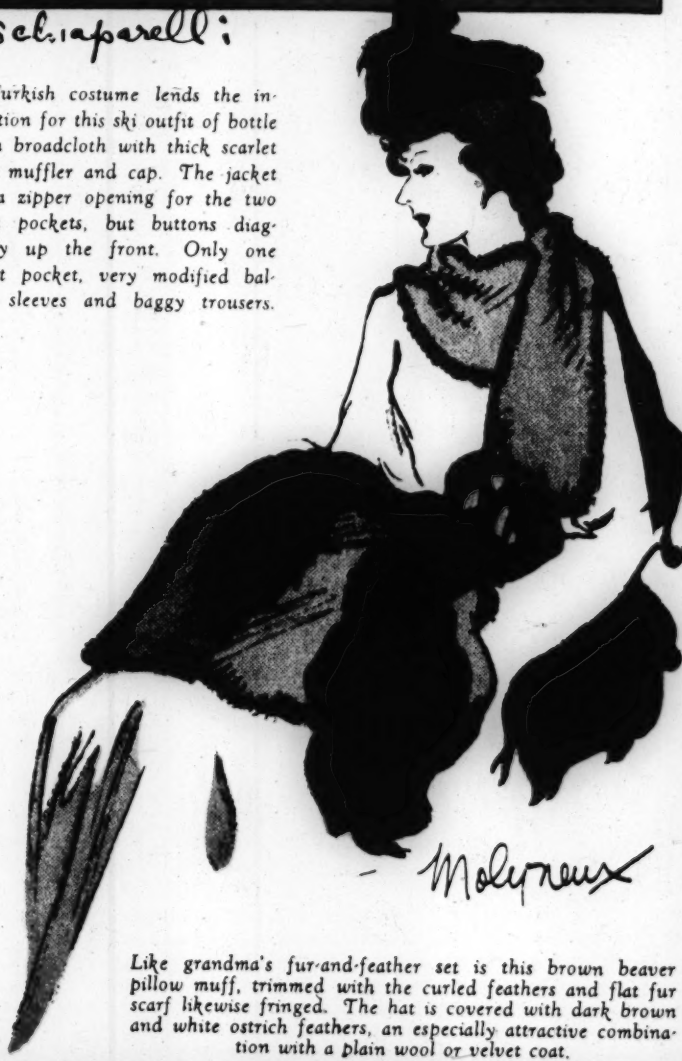

Durable and warm are the brown leather ski-mitts shown at left. The black calf bag has an unusual pencil closing. (The pencil is a real one!)

Schiaparelli:

A Turkish costume lends the inspiration for this ski outfit of bottle green broadcloth with thick scarlet wool muffler and cap. The jacket has a zipper opening for the two front pockets, but buttons diagonally up the front. Only one breast pocket, very modified balloon sleeves and baggy trousers.

Like grandma's fur-and-feather set is this brown beaver pillow muff, trimmed with the curled feathers and flat fur scarf likewise fringed. The hat is covered with dark brown and white ostrich feathers, an especially attractive combination with a plain wool or velvet coat.

Outstanding is this black criss-cross wool suit with seal sleeves and a shoulder-cape, black crepe de chine cravat and wool dress with crepe de chine top. The hat is black velvet with diagonal veil.

Schiaparelli Marcel Bouleau

Unexpected colors seem to spot the southern vogue this year. Below, at left, a gray and white silk jersey jacket with carved wooden buttons worn over a white crepe dress with brilliant green scarf and belt. The hat is green leghorn, tied under the chin with white grosgrain. At right, white ratine shorts and jester's cap, accompanying a blue, rose and white blouse. The belt is of white stitched calf.

Green and gold cellophane fashions this formal afternoon frock with gold kid-trimmed and mask fastened belt. The front has three diagonal panel effects. The hat, which is green velvet, is from Maria Guy.

Despite the fact that Graves behaved shrewdly at his trial, the weight of his briefly recited past history, coupled with Saunders' tale, convicted him. He had done everything, even to growing a lop-sided goatee in jail, to make Saunders' facts seem improbable. But it was no go; the great master spy, adventurer, author, scholar, engineer, ex-dental student, graduate of many universities (and not a few penitentiaries) was frankly beaten.

"Ach Gott!" was all he had to say as he was led off to prison.

MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS

NEIL
HAMILTON

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. A accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in the proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly. This week's star is Neil Hamilton. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by him in these roles in the following movies: David Mackenzie in "By Your Leave"; Bob Hartwell in "Blind Date," and Holt in "Tarzan and His Mate."

THE CHARACTERS

BUDDY BUNNY—An unfortunate

little rabbit.

BOB BUNNY—Buddy's twin brother.

ICY BLAST—One of King Winter's guards.

KING WINTER—Ruler of the Land of Snow.

FLUFFY—A little snowflake.

Poor Buddy and Bob. What a terrible fix they are in. But they have no one to blame but themselves. The other night, after all the members of the Bunny family had gone to bed, Buddy and Bob deecided to steal out of doors and play in the snow. So they got up and noiselessly left the house. The air was full of dancing snowflakes, but the little Bunnys didn't mind that—they liked snow. But these snow-

MARRIAGE AMONG THE ARTISTS—Cornelius Vanderbilt, sometime reporter, and scion of the famous American family, and his bride, formerly Helen Varner, painter. They met three years ago in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where both were seeking artistic material, and were married there last month.

Among those seen at the Swiss resort this winter was Princess Gackwar of Baroda, who visited the skating rink in Indian costume—plus gloves.

THE BEAVER COMES TO MISSOURI

Making what is said to be their first appearance in this State in many years, these industrious amphibious animals have dammed a stream on the farm of Mrs. Oscar Johnson at St. Albans. The photograph above shows some of their building material, its ends hewn with their teeth. At right and below are two views of the dam.

APRON STRINGS — This baby monkey in the zoo at Melbourne, Australia, is finding its ambition curtailed by its fond mother's solicitude and firm grip.

FLOWERS FOR A FLYER — Amelia Earhart Putnam welcomed to Honolulu by little Dorothy Leslie and other admirers who loaded her with leis. The aviatrix made the trip by boat.

HERO WORKSHIPPER

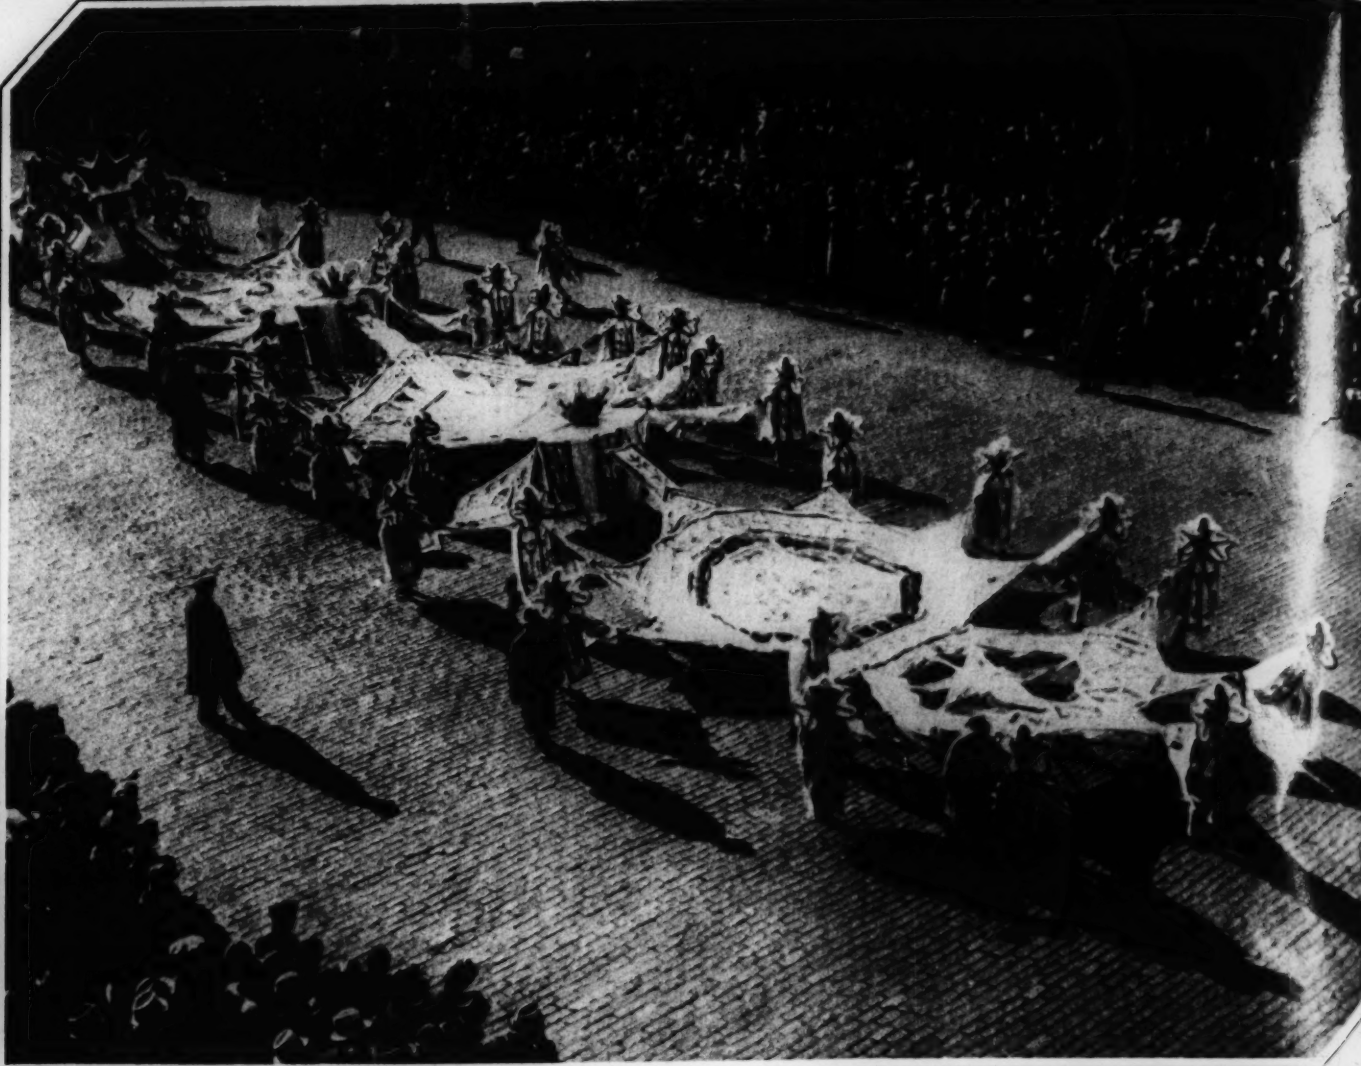

Thirteen-year-old Catalina Galmes, non-swimmer, was so eager to get a look at the Duke of Gloucester when he came to Sydney, Australia, that she chased his cruiser on a water bicycle. When she was overturned by a ferry, there was a heroic rescue—but not by the Duke; a ferry passenger jumped.

TOWN HOUSE

This blazingly illuminated building is the new house which William Lescaze, modernist architect, built himself out of glass and concrete and chromium. It is the first small residence in this style that New York has seen.

FOUNTAIN OF MOLTEN WIRE—A fiery cascade shooting ten feet into the air was created by an electrical charge in the laboratories of the General Electric Company in Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE—Philadelphia's Mummers' Parade, though held up by rain this year, came shortly after New Year's day and was a fine spectacle of sun and color. Here is shown the passing of the captain of Kline's Club, one of the 22 social groups that participate in the parade.

THE MEDAL-WINNING MUSSOLINI

In the front row of their school room in Rome sit Romano and Anna Maria, young son and daughter of the Premier of Italy. Both won medals for "diligence and ability in class."

ORIENTAL CARGO — Two hundred tubs of goldfish arrived recently in San Francisco, where somebody had put in an order for them to Japan. It was a record-breaking shipment.

GOOD LUCK COMES TO UNCLE HARRY
IN HIS WHEEL CHAIR
(From one of 10,000 letters from thankful hearts)

CAN'T YOU LET ME WORK A LITTLE LONGER EACH DAY, DOCTOR? THIS JOB OF ADDRESSING ENVELOPES IS MY FIRST INCOME IN 5 YEARS.

NO MR. JENSEN, IN YOUR CONDITION IT'S NOT SAFE.

BUT MY OLD FOUNTAIN PEN FLOWS SO POORLY AND CLOGS SO OFTEN THAT I CAN ADDRESS ONLY 500 ENVELOPES IN THE 6 HOURS.

MAYBE IT'S NOT THE PEN'S FAULT. TRY USING A DIFFERENT INK-- TRY PARKER QUINK. I USE IT BECAUSE...

THANKS, TOMMY. NOW WE'LL SEE IF QUINK DOES AS THE DOCTOR SAYS-- ACTUALLY CLEANS ANY PEN AS IT WRITES-- DRIES ON PAPER SO QUICKLY I DON'T NEED A BLOTTER-- FLOWS SO FREELY I CAN WRITE AS FAST AS I LIKE WITHOUT GETTING TIRED.

THAT EVENING I COUNTED THE ENVELOPES TWICE, UNCLE HARRY, AND INSTEAD OF 500, YOU ADDRESSED 760 TODAY!

THAT'S GREAT, TOMMY! THAT MEANS I CAN EARN $4 OR $5 MORE A WEEK WITHOUT WORKING A MINUTE LONGER THAN BEFORE.

YES, AND MR. JENSEN LOOKS SO MUCH MORE RESTED THAT I WANT TO PRESCRIBE PARKER QUINK FOR EVERYBODY SICK OR WELL!

NED BRANT By BOB ZUPPKE

DRAWN BY B. W. DEPEW

BATTLING desperately to avoid defeat at the hands of Carter college, the famous Rangers, national collegiate champions, find themselves trailing by two points with the game almost over.

Steele, spectacular Ranger forward, ties up the ball game!

THAT'S 33 APiece, GANG-LET'S GO!

TIME OUT FOR CARTER!

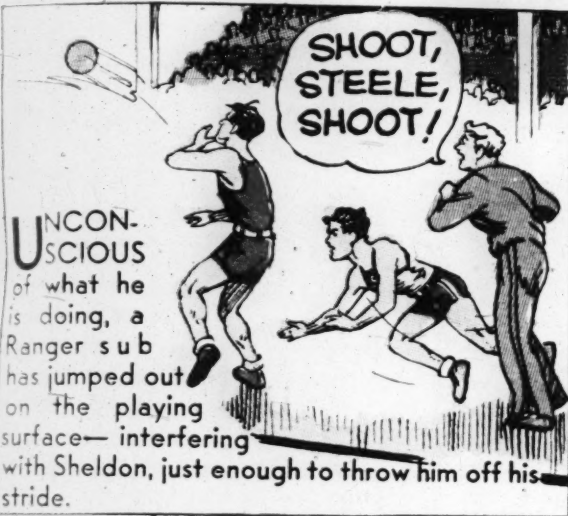

I CALLED TIME OUT TO BREAK THEIR STRIDE-IF WE CAN HOLD THEM A FEW MORE SECONDS THERE'LL BE AN OVERTIME PERIOD AND WE CAN GET A BREATHING SPELL

HAVE A SHOT, STEELE-HAVE A SHOT!

STOP HIM! SHOTGUN!

Break- ing loose again. Steele streaks for the Rangers' basket with- out a Carter player between himself and the goal!

SHOOT, STEELE, SHOOT!

UNCON- SCIOUS of what he is doing, a Ranger sub has jumped out on the playing surface- interfering with Sheldon, just enough to throw him off his stride.

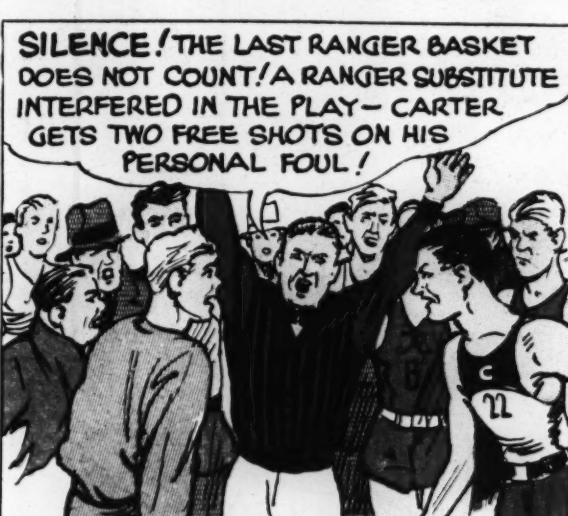

IT'S GOOD, STEELE- WE'VE WON, 35 TO 33!

SAY, WHAT ARE YOU- THE CHEER LEADER FOR THIS TEAM? I'LL HAVE TO CALL A FOUL ON YOU FOR THAT!

WHA- WHATS THAT?

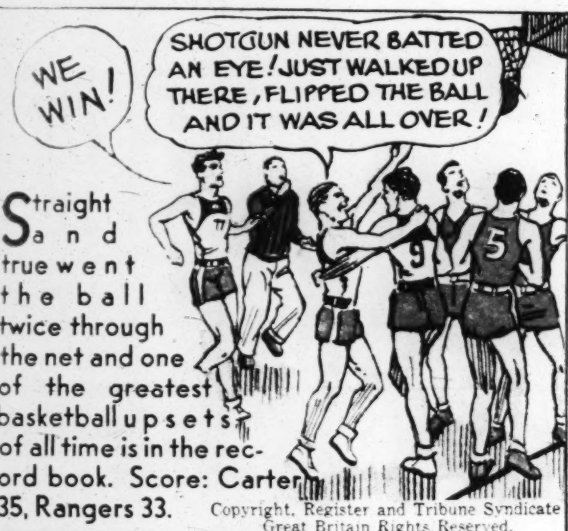

STEELE'S shot swishes through the basket as the gun ends the game.

SILENCE! THE LAST RANGER BASKET DOES NOT COUNT! A RANGER SUBSTITUTE INTERFERED IN THE PLAY- CARTER GETS TWO FREE SHOTS ON HIS PERSONAL FOUL!

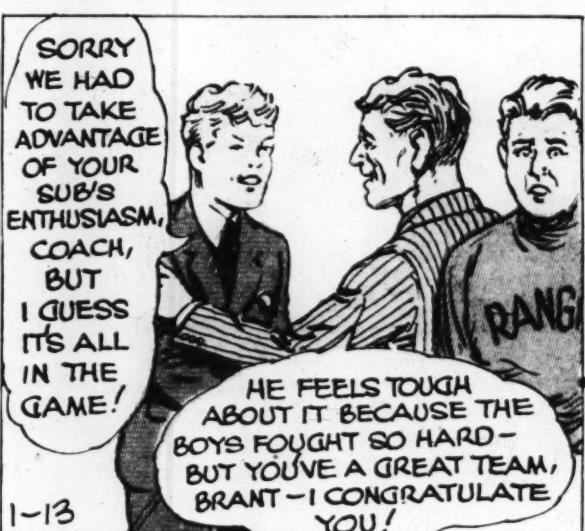

A HUSH falls over the crowd as Shotgun Sheldon steps coolly up to the foul line and takes a look at the basket.

WE WIN! SHOTGUN NEVER BATTED AN EYE! JUST WALKED UP THERE, FLIPPED THE BALL AND IT WAS ALL OVER!

Straight and true went the ball twice through the net and one of the greatest basketball upsets of all time is in the record book. Score: Carter 35, Rangers 33.

SORRY WE HAD TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF YOUR SUB'S ENTHUSIASM, COACH, BUT I GUESS IT'S ALL IN THE GAME!

HE FEELS TOUGH ABOUT IT BECAUSE THE BOYS FOUGHT SO HARD- BUT YOU'VE A GREAT TEAM, BRANT-I CONGRATULATE YOU!

I STAYED AWAY FROM THIS GAME SO THAT NED WOULD HAVE A CHANCE TO CALL ME AND TELL ME WHO WON -IF HE DOESN'T, I'LL BE FURIOUS!

Fay Chambers, the co-ed who is trying her best to let Ned Brant know he can have a date without using a megaphone, resorts to subterfuge.

I'D LIKE TO CALL FAY AND TELL HER ABOUT THE GAME- BUT IF SHE ISN'T INTERESTED ENOUGH IN ME OR THE TEAM TO COME TO THE GAME, I GUESS I'D BETTER NOT!

FANS who have seen Ned Brant inspire his teams to reach brilliant heights would insist the chap at the phone is someone else.

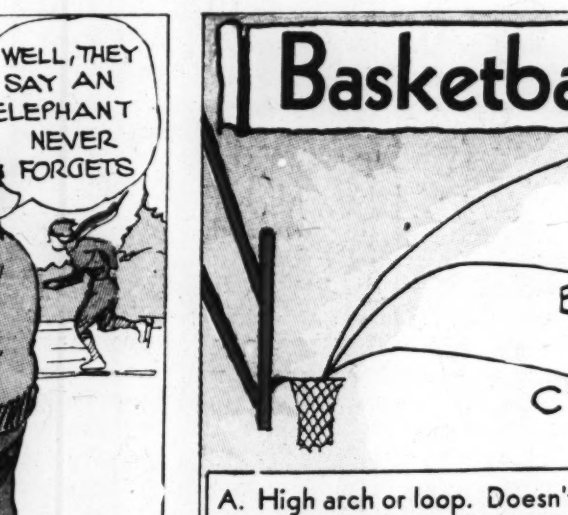

Off The Campus

YOU CERTAINLY ARE LIGHT ON YOUR FEET, HANNAH!

AW, JAKE, AREN'T YOU THE ONE, THOUGH- BUT I'M A PRETTY GOOD SKATER- WATCH THIS-

I HAVEN'T TRIED THIS SINCE I WAS A LITTLE GIRL-

WELL, THEY SAY AN ELEPHANT NEVER FORGETS

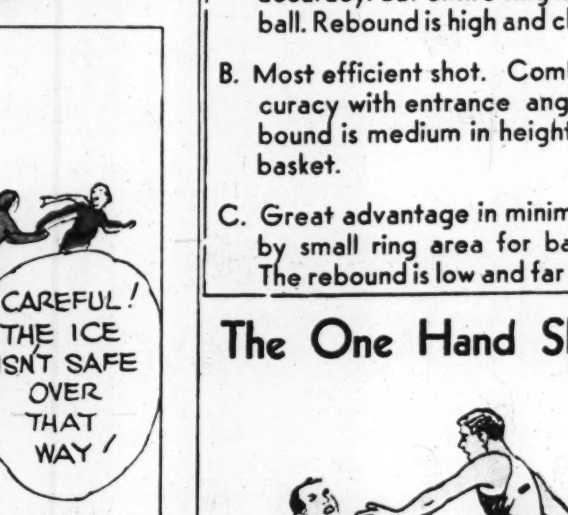

WHAT WAS THAT YOU SAID??

I SAID YOU WERE ELEGANT, MY PET!

NOW, LET ME SHOW YOU ONE THAT USED TO CAUSE THE CROWD TO GATHER AROUND ME!

CAREFUL! THE ICE ISN'T SAFE OVER THAT WAY!

IT TAKES PERFECT BALANCE, OR DOWN YOU GO!

JAKE! LOOK OU-U-U-UT!

JAKE'S artistry reaches the saturation point.

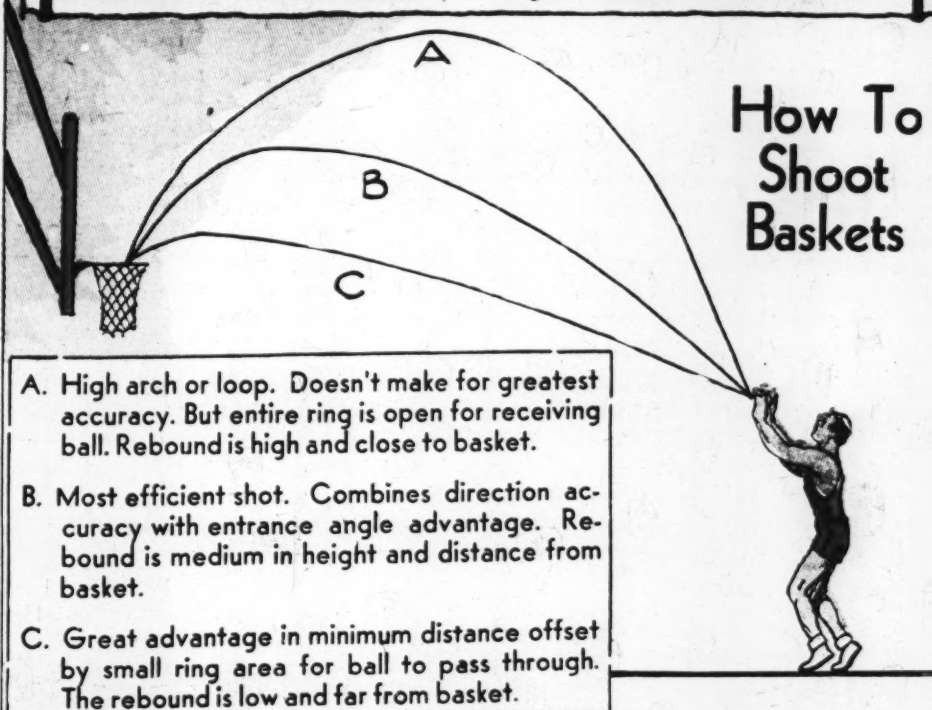

IF I'D KNOWN YOU WERE GOING IN, I'D HAVE HAD YOU BRING ME OUT A PICKEREL

I HOPE HE ISN'T WEARING MY PANTS!

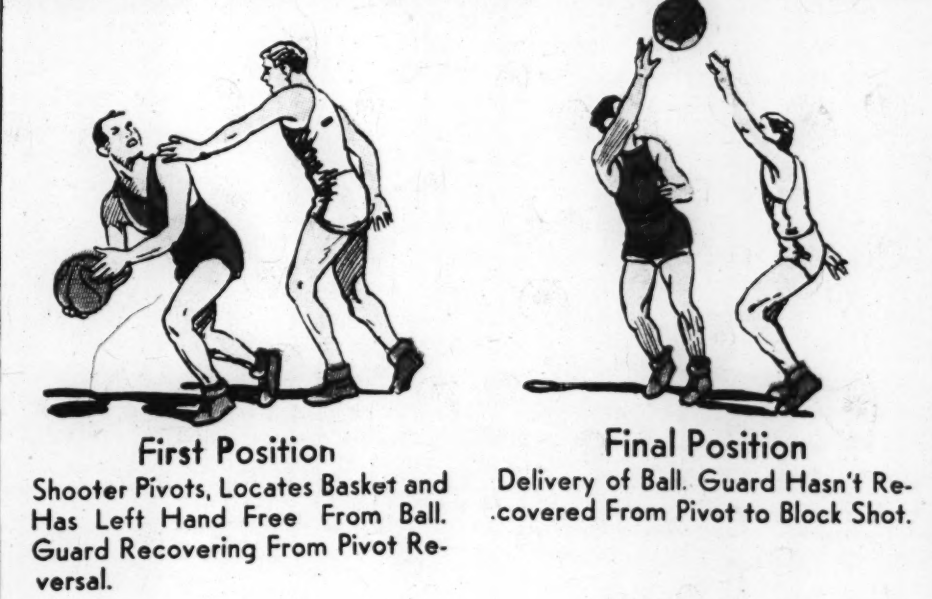

WHA- WHATS- SO-S-SO- F-F-F-F-FUNNY?

Basketball.. By NED BRANT

- A. High arch or loop. Doesn't make for greatest accuracy. But entire ring is open for receiving ball. Rebound is high and close to basket.
- B. Most efficient shot. Combines direction accuracy with entrance angle advantage. Rebound is medium in height and distance from basket.
- C. Great advantage in minimum distance offset by small ring area for ball to pass through. The rebound is low and far from basket.

The One Hand Shot--Most Difficult To Guard

First Position
Shooter Pivots, Locates Basket and Has Left Hand Free From Ball. Guard Recovering From Pivot Reversal.

Final Position
Delivery of Ball. Guard Hasn't Recovered From Pivot to Block Shot.

RESTLESS RALPH

AND HOW HE GOT RELIEF FROM SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

HA HA! 2 O'CLOCK AND YOU HAVEN'T HAD A WINK OF SLEEP YET! YOU'LL CERTAINLY BE A WRECK TOMORROW.

EVERYBODY'S TALKING ABOUT THE WAY YOU'RE SLIPPING LATELY. THESE SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WILL LOSE YOU YOUR JOB YET.

... AND THAT WIFE OF YOURS--LOTS OF FUN SHE GETS OUT OF LIFE--MARRIED TO A WORN-OUT, NERVOUS WRECK LIKE YOU! I DON'T SEE HOW SHE STANDS IT.

NEXT MORNING

WHY RALPH--DON'T TELL ME YOU'VE HAD ANOTHER SLEEPLESS NIGHT!

I JUST TOSSED AND TURNED TILL AFTER 2. I GUESS I'M JUST ABOUT AT THE END OF MY ROPE.

I TELL YOU THESE SLEEPLESS NIGHTS ARE SERIOUS, MABEL. HE'S SIMPLY EXHAUSTED ALL THE TIME--LOOKS AS THOUGH HIS NERVES WERE READY TO CRACK.

OF COURSE IT'S SERIOUS, BETTY. BUT MAYBE THE ANSWER IS SIMPLER THAN YOU THINK--JUST TRY GIVING HIM A CUP OF HOT OVALTINE EVERY NIGHT BEFORE HE GOES TO BED--AND SEE WHAT HAPPENS THEN!

OVALTINE, YOU MEAN THE SWISS FOOD-DRINK YOU HEAR SO MUCH ABOUT THESE DAYS?

YES--AND IT'S REALLY SURPRISING THE WAY IT USUALLY HELPS "POOR SLEEPERS" SLEEP--AND BEST OF ALL, THERE AREN'T ANY DRUGS IN IT--THAT'S WHY WE LIKE TO RECOMMEND IT.

I WANT A CAN OF OVALTINE, PLEASE.

OVALTINE Prices Greatly REDUCED

THAT NIGHT

MAM, THAT'S CERTAINLY A WONDERFUL-TASTING NIGHTCAP. IT WINS MY VOTE HANDS DOWN.

AND MABEL SAYS IT'S SIMPLY WONDERFUL THE WAY IT HELPS YOU GET TO SLEEP. SO HURRY ALONG TO BED.

A FEW MINUTES LATER

WHAT A SLEEP! WHAT A DAY! WHAT A GOOD OLD WORLD!

WHY RALPH, YOU LOOK LIKE A DIFFERENT PERSON!

JUST WAIT TILL I GET DOWN TO THAT OFFICE! I'LL CERTAINLY SHOW 'EM--AND HOW!

REALLY, I CAN HARDLY BELIEVE MY EYES!--I CAN'T WAIT TO CALL UP MABEL AND TELL HER HOW MARVELOUSLY THAT OVALTINE WORKED!

A FEW WEEKS LATER

... AND IN RECOGNITION OF THE WONDERFUL WORK HE'S BEEN DOING LATELY, I WANT TO ANNOUNCE THE PROMOTION OF RALPH BENSON TO SALES MANAGER.

'ATTA BOY RALPH!

SALES MANAGER! WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THAT?

THAT NIGHT--A BIG CELEBRATION

I TELL YOU HONEY, I FEEL AS FULL OF PEP AS A 2-YEAR-OLD SINCE I GOT RID OF THOSE SLEEPLESS NIGHTS.

ISN'T IT MARVELOUS, RALPH! IT MAKES ME THINK OF WHEN WE WERE FIRST MARRIED--THANKS TO MABEL AND OVALTINE.

SEND THIS IN AND SEE FOR YOURSELF HOW MARVELOUS OVALTINE IS--AND WHAT IT CAN DO FOR YOU!

OVALTINE is a delicious pure food concentrate you take with hot milk just before going to bed. A scientific food creation that promotes sound sleep quickly--while thousands of delighted users report that it has brought them new strength and energy, as well as steadier nerves next day.

More than 20,000 physicians approve the use of Ovaltine. It is also advised as a strengthening food for under-developed children--and for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged. . . . See for yourself how remarkable it is. Get a can of Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store today. Or mail the coupon for a liberal trial supply.

MAIL FOR 3-DAY TEST

THE WANDER COMPANY, Dept. 132-1
180 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I enclose 10c to cover cost of packing and mailing. Send me your test package of Ovaltine. (One package to a person.)
